THE RED CROSS FUND IS INSUFFICIENT

FOR FLOOD SUFFERERS CARE THE ORGANIZATION DECLARES

Devastation of South Central Louisiana Now Feared—Should the Levees Give Way the Flood Would Be Released Over Seven Parishes To the South, Covering Four Million Acres, and Endangering the Lives of 250,000 People.

Devastation of south central Louisiana by the flood was regarded as imminent Sunday night by federal and state agents.

A rescue fleet and supplies for this district are being concentrated against a probable break in the levees of the Bayou des Glaives that is bearing the greater part of the pressure from the Mississippi river flood and backwaters of the great lake to the north.

Should these embankments give way, the flood will be released over seven parishes to the south, containing approximately 4,000,000 acres and 250,000 inhabitants. In this section is located the Louisiana "sugar bowl" where virtually all of the domestic cane is grown.

A steady battle on this flood front has been carried on for almost a month in the hope that the dykes might be held, but with the tide rising with unprecedented rapidity this hope virtually has been abandoned.

The fight still is being carried on, however, with the engineers concentrating all available forces at danger points that are developing along a stretch of more than 30 miles.

A break there will divert a large part of the flood water from the Mississippi to the Atchafalaya basin and materially relieve the situation south of the main stream from the mouth of the old river north of Baton Rouge to New Orleans, it is said.

On this front of more than 250 miles the Mississippi embankments still are holding.

The levees were inspected Sunday by Secretaries Herbert C. Hoover and Dwight F. Davis, who made an automobile trip from Baton Rouge to New Orleans after conferring with John M. Parker, former governor and Louisiana flood dictator, and state officials.

After a discussion of the situation with the members of the Citizens' Relief committee at New Orleans Mr. Hoover, who is President Coolidge's personal representative in the flood area, is to return to Baton Rouge to remain until the crisis is passed.

Meantime, Secretary Davis is to proceed to St. Louis to meet with Charles L. Potter, chairman of the Mississippi river commission, and other engineers for a discussion of a comprehensive plan of future flood control for recommendation to congress next December.

When in New Orleans both Secretary Hoover and Secretary Davis are to visit the artificial crevasse made week before the last at Caernavan, 15 miles below New Orleans, to relieve the flood pressure. This crevasse now is more than 2,000 feet wide, and high explosives still are being used to remove the batture in front of the break so that the full force of the current may be directed into St. Bernard and Plaquemines parishes, a large part of which already are flooded.

While crevasse waters from the Mississippi river were completing the inundation of the east central portion of the state, further improvement in the situation to the north, below the Arkansas line, was reported. The flood waters flowing down from the Arkansas river apparently have passed their crest and the levels in a number of towns in that section are lower again steadily.

With a break in the levee in the Atchafalaya river, in south central Louisiana, believed to be imminent, Red Cross officials Sunday continued concentration of a rescue fleet and supplies for use in that region.

The Atchafalaya flows from a point near the conjunction of the Red river with the Mississippi to the gulf and should a break occur in the levee, a great body of water would be turned loose, relieving the situation along the lower main levee system between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, but flooding a vast area.

Many inhabitants of the section already have evacuated to new concentration camps in St. Martinville and St. Lambre parishes, but other thousands likely will have to be removed in boats in the event the levee goes out.

American "Friendship Dolls" in Japan

Daughters of wealthy Japanese received 48 American "friendship dolls," one from each state of the Union. The children are seen filing out of the reception salon of the S. S. HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

—Youngstown—Two were killed and ten injured in accidents here over the weekend.

Miss Evelyn Burkhart, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, was killed when an automobile in which she was riding collided with another machine. Occupants of the second machine fled after the accident. One man was severely cut on the face.

Wilbur Thomas, also of Johnstown suffered a broken arm.

James Livingston, Champion Heights, Ohio, was killed when he stopped in front of a truck driven by H. P. Carpenter, Bristolville. Coroner J. C. Henshaw exonerated Carpenter.

Columbus—His hands chained behind his back, George Watson Hunter, 26, of Wilkinsburg, Pennsylvania, was found today walking toward Columbus. He told an unusual story of having been lured to a lonely house in Pittsburgh and robbed last Wednesday. He remembers nothing that has happened since then until he regained consciousness today.

Wooster—Fenwick Ewing, 60, died here today after a week's illness. He was attorney and assistant general manager Ohio Public Service Co. His former home was in Lancaster.

Girard—The barking of a dog probably saved the lives of six persons when the home of John Balog Parkwood, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $7000. The dog, frightened by the cracklings of the flames, barked wildly awakening the family.

Nelsonville—Informally leaders of the Union miners of the Hocking Valley said today they would continue demonstrations in protest against the operation of coal mines in the district on a non-union basis.

These demonstrations, it was said, would be as the one at Lick Run Friday without violence and efforts would be made to induce miners to stand by the union wage scale.

Radio Saves Life of Man Lost in Canadian Wilds

Montreal.—Radio saved the life of a man lost in the fierce blizzard that struck Saskatchewan recently. Robert Thomson, who lives with his parents at Bratton, was visiting friends in the neighborhood when the storm began. A newcomer to this country, he ventured out in the snow and quickly lost his bearings. A search failed to find him within 24 hours.

Constable Band of the Saskatchewan provincial police, when notified that Thomson was missing, asked radio station CFQC at Saskatoon to broadcast a description of him. At a point miles from Bratton an elevator man picked up the message and sent word that a man resembling Thomson had been seen not far from this town. The scene of the search was shifted at once and young Thomson was found not long after. He had wandered 40 miles in a day and a half, and was in an exhausted condition when found.

A Dollar Dinner for Four

To devise daily dinners which are tasty and wholesome, yet inexpensive, requires never-ending thought and planning on the part of the housewife. Some helpful suggestions may be found in the following menu, designed to serve four persons at a cost of only $1.00.

Corn Souffle Kraut Cocktail Buttered Whole Wheat Toast

Pineapple Ice

SAUERKRAUT juice makes a wholesome and appetizing cocktail. The juice is now canned separately, costing 19 cents a can. 1/2 can, estimated as costing 10 cents, would make 4 cocktails. Cold and served in cocktail glasses it gives a decided "kick" to the appetite.

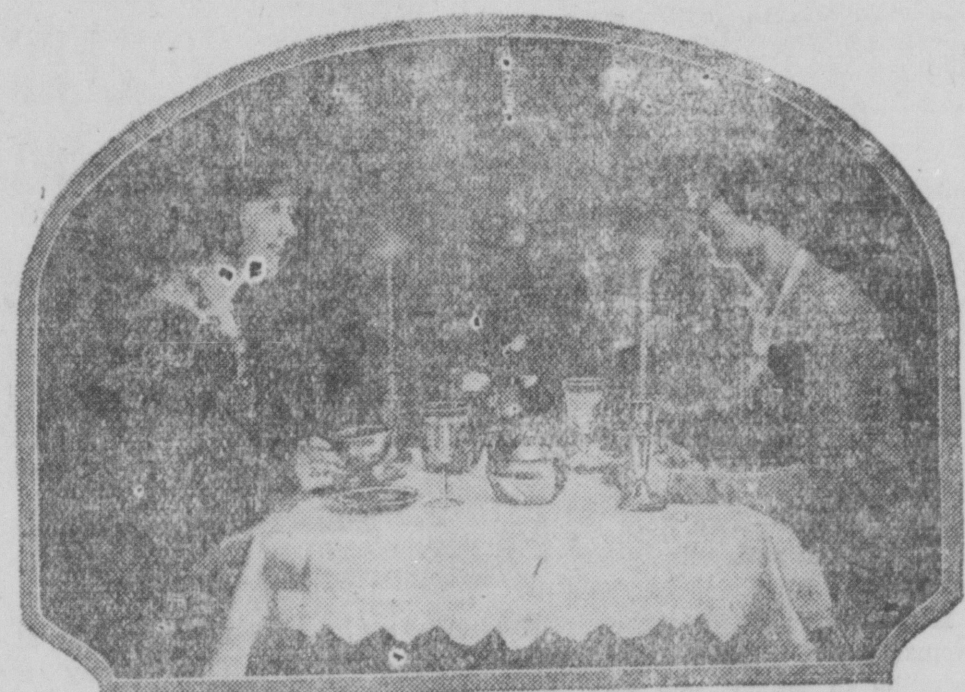

A can of corn for the souffle may be had for 13 cents. Chop corn fine, add 1 cup milk and simmer ten minutes. Season, and stir in 1 teaspoon cornstarch blended with a little cold milk. Cook a few minutes, then whip in yolk of 1 egg and lastly the stiffly beaten white. Bake 20 minutes in well-greased casserole. 1 egg will cost 4 cents.

A can of spinach for the salad costs

19 cents, and 1 egg 4 cents. Chop spinach, mix with mayonnaise and serve a slice of hard-boiled egg on each portion. A loaf of whole wheat bread costs 10 cents. Enough coffee for four persons, at an average cost of 40 cents a pound, costs about 4 cents.

A No. 2 can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple costs 19 cents. Mix 1 1/4 cups sugar and 1 cup hot water. Boil until syrup spins a thread. Add 1 cup cold water, 1/4 cup lemon juice and 2 cups crushed pineapple. Freeze until stiff.

Total cost of main ingredients approximates 83 cents, leaving 17 cents to cover cost of butter and sugar for the meal, and minor ingredients.

Asparagus for Appetizing and Attractive Dishes

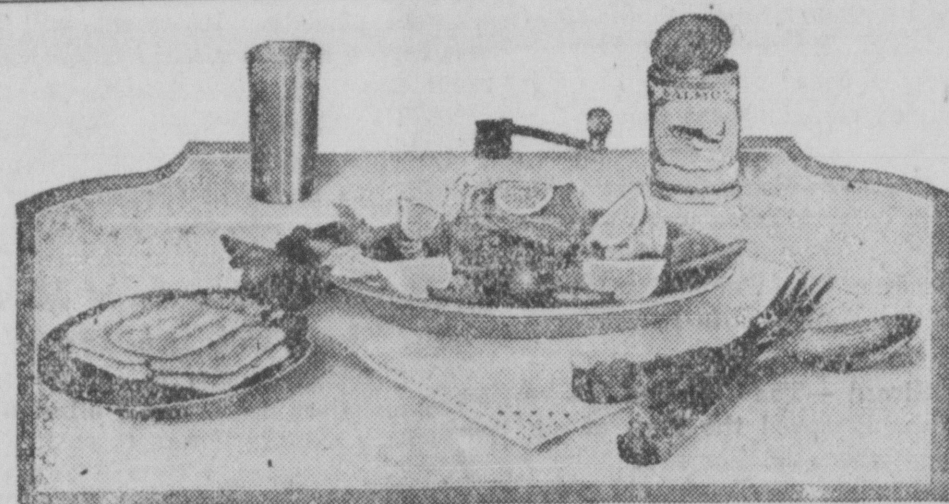

AT this season of the year, after we have allowed ourselves the richer foods which we taboo during warmer weather, and before summer has brought her riches to our table, there is perhaps no more appetizing vegetable to serve than delicate asparagus.

Asparagus on toast makes a delightful luncheon dish, and is prepared quickly by pouring a creamy white sauce over the asparagus, which has been heated, and laid on triangles of toast. Garnish with parsley.

A satisfying dinner dish is Arlington Asparagus. Arrange canned asparagus stalks through rings (one-third inch wide) cut from lemon peel. Place on oblong pieces of buttered toast (from which crusts have been removed), moistened with liquid in which the asparagus was canned. Brush lemon rings with melted butter; place in oven to reheat asparagus, and arrange on serving dish.

For an attractive Asparagus Salad use canned asparagus tips, drained and rinsed. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with French dressing to which has been added one-half table-spoon tomato catsup.

Salmon Prevents Goitre

SALMON as a preventive of goitre is one of the newest discoveries of science, and one which is attracting unusual interest, due to the recent spread of goitre, not only among adults but also among school children.

That salmon eaten plentifully will prevent goitre has been known for some time, since that fish contains iodine, the lack of which is one of the causes of goitre both in men and animals. There is a large goitrous region in the United States which includes the territory neighboring the Great Lakes, and much of the states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Utah, Colorado, Eastern Oregon and Washington.

Physicians have discovered that when the gland has not enlarged but is starved for iodine, the provision of iodine will prevent goitre, but when the gland has already enlarged, the advice of a specialist should be obtained before taking iodine.

A recent investigation of the iodine content of canned salmon has been engaged in by the Seattle Laboratory of the National Canners' Association and the study has revealed that this commodity is particularly high in iodine.

Housewives will do well to serve salmon several times each week in some of its various tempting forms. As a meat course, a salmon steak taken from the can and heated, served with butter sauce and garnished with parsley is a very appetizing dish. For entrees and salads it is one of the most colorful and delightful dishes on the menu.

PUBLIC IS SHOWN NEED FOR SAVING NATION'S FORESTS

U. S. Timberland Placed at 470,000,000 Acres, One of Greatest National Resources.

Denver, May 6.—That the timberlands of the United States are one of the nation's greatest natural resources was forcibly brought before the public in statistics issued by the forest service of the federal department of agriculture during the observance of "American Forest Week."

The forest lands of the United States include 470,000,000 acres, none of which is required for agricultural purposes, the forest service pointed out, and if this great natural resource is properly managed for the production of a permanent timber crop, the value of the forest lands in the construction and industry, in the maintenance of communities and support of wage earners and the protection of watersheds can hardly be estimated in terms of dollars.

Figures show that the United States is the leading lumber producing country of the world and its manufactured products ranking third in the number of wage earners and seventh in the value of products amongst all the industrial groups of the land.

The lumber industry is exceeded only by the textile, and iron and steel industries in number of wage earners—1,160,000 persons being engaged in 1925 in the lumber and forest products industries.

In power utilization the lumber industry ranks second only to the steel and iron industry, having used 3,500,000 horsepower in 1925.

The annual production of the lumber crop is valued at more than $3,000,000,000.

Of the present area of the country actually forested, 19 per cent is owned by the federal government, 2 per cent by the states and municipalities, and 79 per cent by private owners.

If all the forest lands, actual and potential, in the country were producing trees at maximum capacity, the United States would have no serious timber supply problem, according to the forest service.

Eighty million acres of the 470,000,000 forest lands, however, are entirely denuded and in a non-productive condition, and the United States is using up its timber supply four times as rapidly as that supply is being replaced through growth.

As a consequence reforestation and management of forests must be placed on a scientific and permanent production basis, if the lumber industry is to be maintained on its present profitable scale.

In their observance of "American Forest Week," the forest service warned citizens of the great danger that lurks in forest fires to the lumber industry.

"The 'red terror' is the chief enemy of trees and forests," the forest service pointed out.

Sweeping through a timberland, the red flames of a forest fire beyond control may wreak untold havoc, damaging valuable mature trees, destroying young growth, laying waste grazing lands, injuring protective watersheds and converting to a blackened, fire-scarred waste what were cool, inviting woodlands beckoning to the nature-lover and outdoor recreationist.

The United States forest service places the average annual number of forest fires in the United States during the past 10 years at 51,000. The average area swept by fires each year stands at 15,000,000 acres. The annual damage runs up to $20,000,000, not taking into account the damage to young growth, watersheds and recreational facilities, which can hardly be estimated.

BIGAMY CHARGED

Girl's Story of "Death Threat" Marriage Brings Arrest of Husband.

Cleveland, May 6.—Forced into a loveless marriage by members of a Pittsburgh Black Hand ring was the story told police today by pretty Mrs. Liszetta Favoritto Seetanni, 19, Cleveland.

The story resulted in the arrest of her husband, Sam Seetanni, 27, on a charge of bigamy. Liszetta plans to base divorce proceedings on the outcome of this case.

The girl said Seetanni and two members of a Pittsburgh Black Hand ring went to her father's house in Pittsburgh two years ago, and, under threats forced her to accompany them to a justice of the peace, who performed a civil ceremony.

Liszetta said she never lived with her husband. The young bride was placed in the House of the Good Shepherd here. She remained there, she said, until she discovered her husband had married again.

C. & O. STOCK SKYROCKETS

New York, May 6.—(UP.)—The opinion in Wall Street today that the Interstate Commerce Commission would sanction the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad merger on May 10, brought a wave of buying into stocks involved in the consolidation. Chesapeake & Ohio soared to new high ground at 175½, closing near that level at 175¾, up 3¾ points for the day. Nickel Plate spurted 11½ points while good gains also were scored by Erie and Pere Marquette.

It is expected in Wall Street that a new holding company will be formed to take over Chesapeake & Ohio holdings of Nickel Plate and Van Ness Co., personal holding company of the Van Swearingens, sponsors of the new merger and that a new bond issue will be sold, with Chesapeake & Ohio stock as collateral.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Black and White in the Spring Style Program

Such a furor for the black-and-white compose as is at this immediate moment! There are ways and means without end of interpreting this popular theme, one of the most effective being the black satin skirt topped with a white satin blouse, this applying either to the two-piece frock or the one-piece. The white satin-biased frock in the picture is the very essence of smartness. Note the choker tie-collar, the long snug-fitting sleeves, the narrow belt, and especially the black embroidered cone-shaped pockets—all outstanding style details.

How Neckline Problem May Be Easily Solved

The neckline is often a perplexing problem to the woman who makes her own frocks, but with large and varied displays of neckwear to select from she need only finish off the neck of the frock and adjust whatever collar she prefers. If she has several of these the appearance of her dress will be changed and she will not become "so tired of it."

Among the newest offerings is the surplice collar that extends to the neckline, and the new square collar with the requisite bow at the corner. An exquisite lace collar ties in a bow at the low V and the ends form a rippling jabot. An attractive V collar has a shower of ribbon loops in three colors attached near the shoulder, and the cuffs are similarly adorned. All the mentioned collars have cuffs.

This neckwear combines embroidered batiste and lace, the Valenciennes and Alencon being prominent. These charming collars give a dainty touch to the sheer dresses so much in evidence in advance summer modes, and they give a dressy effect to the print frock that is going to be such a favorite the coming season.

Chic One-Piece Frock Slender and Straight

The increasing vogue of one-piece frocks centers attention upon certain details that give them a distinctly different aspect from the tubelike dresses of several seasons ago. While they are slender and straight in line they achieve an effect of movement and grace by the use of plaits, sometimes stitched part way down, often pressed into place but left free.

Another detail that does away with any tendency toward monotony is the yoke, which sometimes appears only in the back and again may be seen extending far down on the front of the frock. This pointed effect, when combined with a bateau neckline, gives a new line that is distinctly different.

A frock of this type is ideal and may be worn all through the spring. The original is made of crepe satin in the new pinkish beige tone. The yoke is tucked just below the shoulders, while the frock itself is laid in small box plaits held in place with a belt. A flower of the same material is posed on the shoulder.

Black Broadcloth Used for Tailor-Made Coats

Black broadcloth continues to be much used for tailor-made coats. These may have a long-waisted bodice and a flared skirt. The flare is concentrated principally on the sides, and is increased by the use of very thick lynx or light fox fur. The roll collar and the cuffs are also of the fur. Very tailor-made looking coats are also made in satin and in thick crepe marocain, generally in black or dark blue. The roll collars, cuffs, and the edge of the coats are often quilted. Sometimes only the edge is quilted in order that fur can be used for the cuffs and collars. On plain coats sumptuous quilted linings are used.

Ears Are Being Worn

Ears are being worn more and more in Paris this season. Every hairdresser is devising new methods of getting a woman's hair out of the way, either by developing a re-enforced flat curl in front of the ear, or by training the hair to stay above or behind it. The bob remains as the standard, but the necessity for exhibiting the ears has led to variations.

CORROSIVE SUBLIMATE

Or Tar Paper Disks Save Cabbage Plants.

Cabbage maggot flies may be kept from depositing their eggs on the young plants by encircling the stem with a tar paper disk, or the eggs and very young maggots may be destroyed by a solution of corrosive sublimate, according to H. L. Gui, assistant in entomology at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

The flies emerge in great numbers late in April and throughout May. In a few days they begin to deposit eggs in the soil at the base of the plants. Less than a week is required for the eggs to hatch into maggots which feed upon the roots. Unless they are destroyed before the maggots establish themselves in the plant roots, nothing can be done to prevent injury.

The control recommended by Mr. Gui is a solution of 1 ounce of corrosive sublimate in 10 gallons of water. This is applied to the stem of the plant and soil around the base in half teacup quantities to kill the eggs and very young maggots.

The applications are made at weekly intervals, beginning not later than 5 days after the plants are set. The applications may be made with a sprinkling can or small sprayer, but these must be cleaned immediately after being used to prevent injury from the action of the corrosive sublimate on the metal. The solution should not be stored in metal containers as its reaction not only injures the metal but renders the solution worthless as an insecticide.

Tar paper disks about three inches in diameter with a slit from the margin to a hole in the center may be fitted on the plants as they are set and allowed to remain throughout the season. The hole should fit the stem snugly and the disk lie flat on the ground. These disks may be made from single-ply tar paper or they may be purchased from insecticide or seed houses.

Plastic Surgery Seen as Boon to Ex-Convicts

San Quentin, Calif.—The plight of ex-convicts that they seldom have a chance to "go straight" after having run the gauntlet of a penitentiary may find its end in a science popularized by the post-war age—plastic surgery.

Plastic surgery has remodeled the ugly countenance of Jim Daly, fifty-five-year-old convict about to be discharged from San Quentin. Ten days after the operation he walked among his cellmates, unrecognized.

Believing he was to be turned into a world which would slam the door in his face, Daly requested Dr. Leo Stanley, prison physician, to perform the operation.

Doctor Stanley, who has studied plastic surgery, consented. He pared Daly's cauliflower ear down to normal size and used the pieces to fill a gap in his nose. The physician said 22 others have asked for operations.

The prisoners insist that with facial alterations they would be free to really become "new men" to the outside world.

A Blinding Color

A Detroit man who is color blind can discern only yellow. The other day he went on a shopping tour and believed he had purchased a smart new brown suit. When his wife observed it she gasped, and then burst into tears. It was a violent green.

No Uniform Length
The length of a league varies in different countries. The Roman league was 1,376 modern English miles, while the league brought to England by the Normans was equal to 2.9 modern English miles. The metric league is four kilometers. At present the league is a nautical measure equal to the twentieth part of a degree—that is, three geographical miles, or 3,637 statute miles.

Too Inexpensive To Be Without

SUPPOSE something you value highly should be lost by fire, theft, or misplacement. Its loss might be a severe financial blow to you. On the other hand, the lost article might have a sentimental value that would make it irreplaceable. MANY GOOD MEN.

If there ever was a time when there were more bad men than good, it is now; and it probably never was for nature will not allow the positive to be overcome by the negative, the good by the bad, light by darkness, heat by cold, life by death.

The tug-of-war between right and wrong grows fierce at times, but there is never a question as to the right ultimately succeeding. It may get the worst of it for a time, but not for long, and certainly not forever.

In spite of the impression that there are more bad people than good ones for all emergencies, there is room for more good ones, and there is a good man for every good, sensible woman.

One reason so many women pick up bad sticks is because they don't know good ones. They are looking for snug, smooth, pretty ones, instead of searching in the open world they seek for them in hothouses, pretty groves and show places.

Instead of looking for those who have come up in the open, battled successfully for existence and grown into hardy men, they look for the dainty, trim, natty fellows who grow beneath protecting roofs, behind plate glass and under care of well paid nurserymen. These are nice to look upon, their fine manners are agreeable and their attentions are most pleasing.

Alongside of these, the sturdier sons of nature look rough and rugged. Their strong hands are coarser, their sure feet larger and their manners less dainty.

But, mind you, the grasp of their strong hand is more assuring, their standing firmer and their manner more determined.

There are plenty who are waiting to be found, but they are not much given to full dress, champagne suppers and petting parties.

Bear It but Don't Grin

Paraphraser are long suffering. Occasionally they see their stuff credited to somebody else, but never think of shooting themselves.

Keeping It Secret

Irate Parent—Young man, have you ever kissed my daughter?
Sutor—I really couldn't say.
"What! You can't say?"
"No; you see, I promised her I wouldn't tell."

It All Depends

Work eight hours and sleep eight, and you will make a living; but the way you use the other eight will determine the kind of a living you will make.—Tror (Ala.) Messenger.

AGRICULTURAL TRAIN COMING TO OUR COUNTY

Swine Sanitation Special to be in Orient June 6, Run by the B. & O.

An agricultural train emphasizing round worm control is coming this way soon. Paul O. Hurley, agricultural agent for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and Paul Gerlaugh of the Ohio State university were in conference with County Agent H. S. Lewis relative to the Swine Sanitation special which will spend the forenoon of Monday, June 6, in Orient and the afternoon of Monday, June 6, in Mt. Sterling.

The university has been emphasizing round worm control in some of the counties of southwestern Ohio for four years. The success of the farmers in this extension project has prompted the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to run this special train to assist the farmers in their territory to increase the profits of their hog business. If the farmer has more money to spend, the railroad will profit by this situation. The farmer may buy railroad tickets to take the family to Washington D. C., or they may decide to buy a new dining room suite which would be shipped to their dealer thus making increased freight receipts.

"Anything that makes for a more prosperous community," says Mr. Hurley, "makes for a more prosperous railroad."

The university is interested in getting the information relative to the swine sanitation in general use by hog growers, because the men who have followed these suggestions say their hogs have made them more money when these practices have been followed.

The Swine Sanitation special will carry material and information on internal parasites, emphasizing the common round worm and will also show the preferable protein feeds to use with corn in feeding hogs.

Assisting the railroad and the university will be a representative of the United States department of agriculture. The Experiment Station is assisting in supplying material on feeding.

SEVEN MILLION IN EX-SERVICE UNITS

Germany Has Largest Single Group of Veterans.

Paris.—Seven and one-half million survivors of the World war are enrolled in various ex-service men's associations and veterans' organizations throughout the world, according to unofficial figures tabulated by the Federation Interalliee des Anciens Combattants, or Allied Legions, and published in the last edition of the Fidalac bulletin, issued monthly from Federation headquarters in Paris.

Four and one-half million of these organized ex-service men reside in the countries allied against the central powers during the World war and 3,000,000 are citizens of Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria.

Of the 4,500,000 in the allied countries, 3,235,250 are affiliated, through their national organizations, with the Federation Interalliee des Anciens Combattants.

Germany Has Largest.

The largest single organization of ex-service men of the World war is in Germany. It is the State Association of Former Warriors, numbering 2,000,000 members. Seven other ex-service men's associations in Germany have a total membership of 732,000 members.

France has the largest number of enrolled veterans of any of the allied countries, its 14 associations of ex-service men having a total membership of 1,615,500. Eight of these 14 associations, with a combined membership of 1,122,500, are affiliated with the Fidalac. The largest of these associations is the National Union of Ex-Service Men (the Union Nationale des Combattants), with a roll of 400,000 members.

Italy comes third in the number of its organized veterans, having 750,000. The majority of these are members of the National Association of Italian Ex-Service Men, which is a part of the Fidalac.

650,000 in Legion.

In the United States the one big association of ex-service men is the American Legion, also a member of the Fidalac. The American Legion numbers approximately 650,000 members. Other associations in the United States have 70,000 members.

The British Legion, affiliated with the Fidalac, has 400,000 members. Belgium has 118,000 organized ex-service men, of whom 107,000 are affiliated with the Fidalac. Their largest association is the National Federation of Ex-Service Men, which represents 56,000 members.

There are 458,250 members of the nine ex-service associations in Poland, seven of which are members of the Fidalac.

Rumania also has nine associations with a total membership of 157,000. The largest organization is that of the National Union of Ex-Service Men and it is a member of the Fidalac.

In Czechoslovakia there is a large division of ex-service men, there being 13 different national associations. Three of these associations, having a total membership of 2,500, are members of the Fidalac. The remaining 10 associations count 200,000 members.

Austria has 142,800 enrolled ex-service men; Hungary, 70,000, and Bulgaria 40,000.

Court Verdict Doooms Man to Obscure Place in Home

Buffalo, N. Y.—Husbands must take a back seat in the modern home, Federal Judge John R. Hazel ruled, in effect, here.

Handing down his decision in the case of Mary Swierbienski, convicted on March 10 of selling liquor at her home, Judge Hazel upheld the contention of Roy P. Ohlin, assistant United States attorney, that "today the husband has assumed a position of relative obscurity." Counsel for Mrs. Swierbienski had argued, that she could not have been convicted because her husband, Benny, had been acquitted of the same charge and that under the old English common law a wife could not be convicted and sentenced for a misdemeanor when her husband, arrested with her for the same offense, was not similarly treated.

Judge Hazel held, in announcing the decision, that Mrs. Swierbienski was rightfully convicted, that a similar case had come before United States Circuit Judge D. J. Hammond in Tennessee in 1881. Judge Hammond had this to say and Judge Hazel concurred in the opinion:

"It is almost an absurdity in this day to pretend that husbands can and do coerce their wives into the commission of a crime. To hold it to be a fact is a relic of a belief in the ignorance and pusillanimity of women, which is not, and perhaps never was, well founded."

Alaskan Steamships Plan to Serve Reindeer Steaks

Tacoma, Wash.—Steamships operating from here to Alaskan points are planning to reduce food costs this summer by purchasing reindeer meat at Seward and Nome for the homeward trip. It is believed reindeer meat will not only be relished by passengers and crews alike but will afford a means of advertising one of the resources of the northland. Herds of deer grazing at Cantwell on the government reserve will supply the demand at Seward and tundra herds near Nome can be utilized.

FRIENDS PAY
LAST HONORS
TO WM. CLIFTON

Unusual Outpouring of People to Pay Last Respect in Native Village.

The attendance at the funeral of the late William Clifton, at Darbyville Sunday afternoon, was unusually large. The little Methodist church was filled with an overflowing crowd. Probably as many stood outside as were seated inside the edifice. The streets of the village were lined with autos, and at the cemetery also a large crowd awaited the funeral cortege. The casket was buried beneath a wealth of beautiful flowers tributes from the many friends of the deceased. Rev. Mr. Elsea, of this city officiated. A quartet composed of Milton and Frank Beatty, Dr. E. A. Secoy and Ben Downs sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere; "Sometime We'll Understand" and "Asleep in Jesus."

The pallbearers were Edward E. Prose, George Fickardt, T. O. Gilliland, Henry Mader, Will Rader and Milton Carpenter.

Friends were present from Mt. Sterling, Washington C. H., Frankfort, Chillicothe, Columbus, Springfield, Dayton and relatives and from this city.

Some of those present from out of town were; Harry McClary, Clarence Hoone and family, Mrs. Cecilia Hershey, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Chaplin, Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Friend, Mrs. Della Tolle, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Smith, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Tressner, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Huffer, Mr. and Mrs. James Hoone, Mrs. Cecilia Baskett and three daughters of Columbus; and Mr. and Mrs. Gail Boes and son, Alfred, of Dayton.

New Ocean Surveys to Be Made by U. S. Navy

Washington.—Extension of surveying operations of the Navy department in Southern waters will be undertaken this summer when surveys of the Gulf of Panama and the Pacific approach to the Panama canal will be made.

Charts of the Cuban coast and Gulf of Venezuela are now being made, and when completed will supersede old maps, data for which was obtained from Spanish surveys of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries.

Recently the navy has adopted innovations in surveying methods, among them aerial photography, radio and the sonic depth finder, a device based on deflection of sound from the bottom of the sea.

ONE FIELD THAT WOMAN SELDOM MAKES GOOD IN.

In spite of her achievements in practically every other field, woman still seems unable to meet the requirements for success as a movie director, declares Charles S. Dunning in an article in this week's Liberty. For, as he points out, although several women have directed one or more pictures with varying measures of success, only one, Miss Lois Weber, has earned the title of full-fledged director.

The reason for their lack of success in this field is that they can't stand the gaff, the writer explains. "Miss Weber herself," Dunning writes, "holds out no very encouraging prospect to the girl ambitious to direct."

"If you haven't got superabundant vitality," Miss Weber is quoted, "a hard mind that can be merciless in shutting off disturbances, and the ability to keep going from sunrise to midnight, don't try it. You'll never get away with it."

"Few women can stand the strain. Few get the opportunity for the test. There are easier ways for a gifted woman to make fame and fortune as great as can be found in the motion picture business — opportunities that were not open to me when I first saw a camera."

EXPERIMENT STATION WILL VISIT FARMER

Many Have Access to Cattle, Hogs and Sheep in Circleville, June Fourth.

Since all Ohio farmers can't visit the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station at Wooster, the station will move out to see the farmers this spring.

Western and central Ohio farmers, livestock producers in particular will have access to the experiment station cattle, hogs and sheep this year, and to the results of experiments with them, at livestock days at Fostoria on May 31, Bellefontaine on June 2, and at Circleville June 4.

Stockmen in northeastern Ohio, or in other parts of the state, for that matter, will be welcomed as usual at the annual livestock day at Wooster, this year on May 27.

Eight lots of cattle, 18 lots of hogs and 4 lots of lambs will go on tour. They will show the results of different feeding methods and rations and the results of the same rations on different grades of animals.

81ST ANNUAL STATE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Meets in Columbus at Neil House This Week, 1500 Physicians Expected.

Columbus.—About 1500 physicians are expected in Columbus for the 81st annual convention of the Ohio State Medical association for three days, beginning tomorrow.

Dr. John B. Alcorn, president of the Columbus Academy of Medicine will welcome the physicians.

A number of physicians were playing in the association's annual golf tournament at the Scioto Country today. In addition to the scientific program, there will be luncheons, college and fraternity reunions, exhibits and clinics, it was announced by the general arrangements committee.

Good-Natured Men

Everybody can tell a good-natured man by looking into his face. So it is that the good-natured ones of the country are those who are most imposed upon, but as they bear it cheerfully, thereby clinching their claim to good nature, nobody, not even the good-natured ones, need complain.—Exchange.

Famous Apples

The Baldwin apple was raised near Lowell, Mass., about 1750. The Jonathan and Northern Spy were grown in New York, the Grimes Golden in West Virginia and the Maiden Blush in various places before 1800. The Red Astrachan was imported from Russia in 1835, the Rome Beauty was grown in Ohio by 1848, the Stayman Winesap appeared in Kansas in 1806 and the Delicious in Iowa in 1895.

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

The writer has been handicapped some in keeping up with the news this last week on account of our mail was heavier than common and it seemed like all of it had to have attention. As for instance, we got two letters today and they had such a similarity you would have thought they were sent by the same people. They both said that was the final notice. Which is why we've been busy.

Miss Gloria Blossom, who has been down from the city visiting her aunt, Mrs. Hettie Thomas, meant to go home today. But she's so used to being a half hour late every morning at the place where she works that she went to the depot the same way and missed the train.

Mrs. Milton Hall had some of their window screens put up the other day while Milton was away, and that night when he thought he heard the fire alarm, he stuck his head clear thru one of the screens before he knew it was there.

Several of our citizens were entertained last Saturday night by a medicine man who performed in a flivver at the postoffice corner. And after listening at what he said his medicine would cure, why it seems like just pure carelessness for a person to be sick any more.

Nath Atkins was offended a little yesterday on account of some strangers asked him the way to the basket factory and after he gave them the directions, he saw them stop at the next corner and ask somebody else. Which Nath says looked like they thought he wasn't dependable.

Jud Johnson, who keeps a few chickens for a pastime, found a hen in his lot a few days ago that he didn't know he had. He thinks it is his all right and that he had just sort of overlooked it up to this time. However, he is taking the precaution of keeping the chicken in a coop for a while to make it feel thoroughly satisfied to stay.

Somebody was asking Harley Burton's wife what she does with her spare time, and Harley, who happened to be within hearing, spoke up and said that she used it to think of things for him to do in his spare time.

Earl Smiley, who likes to provide entertainment for people, was trying yesterday in the postoffice to imitate the way Marshal Bailey talks. And when he chanced to look around behind him and saw Bailey standing there close, why he had to strain himself a good deal in an effort to act like it was a cold in his throat made him talk that way.

Lewis Jackson went over to Brownell last Saturday, and in preparing for the trip, he found that his best shirt had a big patch in the back. His wife urged him to wear his coat so that the place wouldn't show. But Lewis said no that he'd go just that way, for he didn't want to deceive anybody.

The remark was made recently how old Cap Bowers, who can't get out much for himself, always asks somebody every day to stop at the postoffice and see if there any mail for him. And seems like that's the most he has to look forward to while he waits for them to come back and tell him there wasn't anything.

Billy Boy, the four year old son of Tom Riley, came very near having to go to bed without his supper last Sunday. And the reason was he took his dog in the house while they had company to let everybody see how he was scratching himself after he came out of the old livery barn.

Mrs. Millie Hicks was tolerably nervous all day yesterday on account of she found that she forgot to lock her front door the night before.

Ballooning Spiders

Ballooning, says the Dearborn Independent, is the method of migration used by many species of spiders. Standing in an open space, with the body elevated, the spider projects from the spinnerets a line of silk which continues until the spider feels the pull of the wind. It releases its hold as it is borne away.

HOW TO INCREASE THE KITCHEN'S USEFULNESS

Springtime being the time for moving to a new house or a thorough cleaning and revamping of the old one, the following directions for putting the kitchen into efficient order, from an article in this week's Liberty, are very timely.

"A handy place for everything and everything in its place.

"Make the most possible use and adaptation of every utensil you have. "Discard tools or equipment that do not justify their storage space.

"Plan with working schedules, time budgets, etc., as would an expert executive.

"Proper heights for all working surfaces, planned according to the elbow height of the worker. (Table surfaces 8 inches below the elbow height of the worker. Sink drain boards 8 inches below the elbow height of the worker.)

"Maintain the kitchen as a workshop for meal preparation only.

"Things used most often nearest at hand.

"Insist on narrow shelves, so that everything is visible.

"Nothing on the floor. This saves bending and makes the floor easy to clean."

Bought Two Tickets for Three

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

JERRY JOSLIN'S carefree whistle, which had continued from the street up the two flights which led to his off-the-hall bedroom, was checked by the sight of his mail, pushed in under the door. Among other envelopes was one that was long and plump, bearing a return address which unmistakably proclaimed the contents to be pink, green and yellow application blanks for the season's big football games.

The question of the very last game of all had been in the background of Jerry's mind for some time, but he had figured it could stay in the background until the application actually arrived. And here they were, reminding him of last summer's folly.

He had gone for his vacation far up into northern Connecticut where there was a brook famed for its trout. And it was while standing knee deep in that brook, playing a gamey old fellow, that his foot caught on a crevice of rock, wrenching his ankle severely.

During the temporary invalidism the woman who ran the Tourists' Rest where he was boarding had been very good to him and her daughter, Leonore had offered the only diversion. He promised to take her to the big game.

How the dickens could he know that, when that time came, Leonore would have faded to a dim memory, and Gloria Manners would fill his entire horizon?

Unfortunately, there was also more to it than the mere question of making good the promise when he was interested in another girl. The Athletic association had seen fit to double very nearly the price of tickets and the purchase of two of them meant something to a young man whose law practice was slim.

Yet he had no choice in the matter and, sitting down at what passed for a writing table, he filled out his application, enclosing check, and wrote a brief note to Leonore.

What consolation he managed to get was of short duration. A prompt reply followed the letter.

"Dear Jerry:
"It is so nice about the game. Am looking forward. Hope we keep on having lovely weather. Mother is coming with me.

"Your old friend,
"LEONORE TUCKER."

It was quite evident that the little country girl did not know the ins and outs of the ticket game. No, all too plainly she was unaware that getting hold of extra tickets made rich men's passages into heaven or camels going through needles' eyes were child's play.

Yet, remembering that Leonore's mother had been kind to him, he knew that all he could do was give up his own seat in some such way that the two women would not be made uncomfortable by suspecting the real reason.

Meanwhile, he refrained from calling on Gloria, torturing himself wondering what other young men—or worse yet, what young man—was taking his place. And when he was not worrying over that, he speculated as to whether Leonore would expect to resume relations at the half-sentimental stage they had left off.

He could not answer that question satisfactorily at the station. She blushed and squeezed his hand a little, but the presence of her mother acted as a preventive of anything demonstrative.

He left them at the portal of the big enclosure, having given them to understand that his seat was in the cheering section and that his presence there was of utmost moment.

Then he sauntered across the trampled mud to the space where the parked cars huddled like gigantic turtles. For a moment he was free to think of Gloria.

Suddenly he heard his name called and turned quickly.

There sat Gloria, looking very charming, at the wheel of her little roadster. Amazed, he went over to her at once. "Gloria! What—I should think—"

"That I'd be inside? Well—" and she sighed—"you see, nobody asked me! But, if I may inquire, where is the pretty blonde you came in with a few minutes ago?"

And then Jerry told her the whole story from beginning to end.

When he had finished, she looked at him thoughtfully. "I couldn't understand what had become of you," she said. "I was curious to know if you were taking anyone to the game and, knowing what section your class was allotted tickets in, I thought I'd hang around on the chance you might go by."

"Gloria!" cried Jerry. "If you went to all that—why, my darling, it must mean the most wonderful thing in the world!"

And evidently it did, for Jerry climbed into the roadster and there were two persons that afternoon who wouldn't have changed places with the yelling, singing crowds inside the stadium.

As for Leonore, she managed an aside just before getting on the train. "Hope you didn't mind my bringing mother, but you see I'm engaged to Willie Stone back home and he wouldn't let me come unless I brought her, too."

"Thank heaven you did!" cried Jerry, so fervently that Leonore is puzzling about it yet.

AMUSEMENTS

Weather report:—Rain, combined with local laugh showers and rolls of thunderous applause to be continued until Tuesday.

In other words, Douglas MacLean's latest Paramount comedy "Let It Rain," arrives at the Met theater on Monday and will remain there for two days. So that the title may not be misunderstood, "Let it Rain," refers to a man and not the weather. "Let It Rain" Riley is a slow, easy-going marine, who believes in getting things as they come, and not in going after them. That is, he remains in this state till he falls for a girl and a sailor buddy does the same. Obviously, she won't come unless he proves his worth and that's where "Let It Rain" gets off to a flying start.

As no war is being fought, it's less to go out and capture an enemy general. But the marines now guard the government mail and "Let It Rain" with the girl's help, endeavors to foil a gang of desperadoes. Most of the action takes place aboard the battleship and inside a regular mail coach. Laughs and gasps come thick and fast when revolvers start popping off, when the car is detached from the locomotive and they find themselves speeding along on a runaway train and when—but why continue?

"Let It Rain" with smilin' Doug MacLean is said to be even better than the star's most recent successes, "Hold That Lion," "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "That's My Baby." Shirley Mason recently known as "Kosher Kitty Kelly" plays the lone feminine part. Eddie Cline, director of some of Jackie Coogan's finest films, makes his Paramount debut.

Inequality in Strides

The reason lost persons always walk in a circle is because one takes unequal steps. One stride will be longer than the other, and will cause a person to walk in a circle unless he has landmarks to guide him.

Famous Causeway

The Giant's Causeway is a famous promontory of closely packed basaltic columns on the coast of Antrim, north Ireland, west of Bencore head, eight miles from Portrush. Its true origin was a great outpouring of basalt in the Tertiary period, but legend ascribed it to Finn McCool or Fingal, who built it as a bridge between Ireland and Scotland for the giants to cross from Antrim to Staffa.

WOMAN RAISES CHAMPION STEER

Miss Una Johnson and Her Champion Steer.

Steadily encroaching on man's domain, another new honor has been awarded the so-called weaker sex. Stock raising has been added to woman's repertoire, and we have pictured above Miss Una Johnson at Elkhorn, Iowa, who raised the champion Iowa steer exhibited at the 1926 International Live Stock Exhibition at Chicago. This steer, among several carloads of other prize baby calves also exhibited at the exposition, was purchased by the Rock Island railroad, which was the first railroad to buy prize-winning calves for its dining-car service.

Seed Potatoes
Not Always True

Incorrect Naming of Varieties Too Frequent to Be Accidental.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of several years' tests by the United States Department of Agriculture of the seed potato offerings of a considerable number of firms, it has been found that the incorrect naming of potato varieties is far too frequent to be entirely accidental. Out of 99 lots of named varieties purchased from 45 seedsmen in 1925, 26 were found to be incorrectly named. The most flagrant example of misnaming, or the substitution of one variety for another, was that of a firm from whom three named varieties were ordered. When the three lots were received it was found that the Spaulding Rose or Rose No. 4 had been substituted for all three varieties. In other words, the seedsmen had filled the order out of a seed bin containing a variety not called for in the order.

Few Correctly Named.

Although a considerable number of varieties were ordered in 1926 only 20 lots were actually received. Of this number only five proved to be of the variety specified in the order. Whether the smaller number of orders filled was due to a desire on the part of seedsmen to avoid having their offerings studied by department officials, or whether, as claimed, they were actually sold out is impossible to determine. The outstanding fact is that less than 25 per cent of those furnished were correctly named.

Dangerous Point.

The danger involved in the use of incorrectly named seed potatoes lies in the possibility of having a late variety substituted for an early one, thereby delaying the market maturity of the crop beyond the normal marketing period. In the absence of effective legislative measures for the control of the abuses mentioned, the only protection afforded the purchasers of small quantities of seed potatoes is to buy certified seed potatoes whenever they are available.

A more wholesome respect on the part of retail seed potato dealers for the correct naming of varieties is highly desirable and can only be brought about through an insistent demand on the part of the purchasing public for the handling of only standard commercial varieties.

Mignonette Is Favored
as Surest Lettuce Head

To produce lettuces that form good heads (a real vegetable gardening accomplishment) try the little Mignonette, a variety that many gardeners find will head when they have no luck with anything else. Iceberg, also known as New York or Wonderful, is another late variety which many gardeners like, but Mignonette is the surest.

There are two types of head lettuce, the butterheads and the crisp lettuces. Both varieties named are of the crisp head sort and they usually are easier to grow than the butterheads. Of the latter the well-known early variety, Big Boston, is best for amateurs.

Inoculate Sweet Clover
When Sowing First Time

If sweet clover is being sown on land for the first time, it is necessary to inoculate the seed. Seed may be sown with oats in the spring, or in February. Either plan is successful. Amounts of seed varying from six pounds to sixteen pounds have been recommended, but most people sow from eight to twelve pounds. Sweet clover is not harder to establish than red clover, provided there is plenty of carbonate of lime in the soil. It will not grow on an acid soil. The plant ranks high as a pasture, and the hay from the first cutting, when the plants are not too woody, is approximately equal to alfalfa hay in feeding value.

Swine and Fowl TB
Receives Attention

Keen Interest Is Shown in Eradication of Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Alongside the extensive measures taken by the co-operative veterinary forces to eradicate tuberculosis from cattle, the problem of eradicating the disease from swine and fowls has received close attention, according to a report recently issued by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

A keen interest has been shown in the eradication of the disease from swine on account of the premium being paid by a number of packers for swine from any modified accredited area; that is, a circumscribed area officially recognized as free from tuberculosis. Reports from many of the modified accredited areas indicate that swine owners have realized substantial sums in this way.

Investigations regarding the source of infection of tuberculosis in swine were conducted with a view of determining to what extent such infection might be traced to tuberculosis fowls. The question of fowl tuberculosis also continues to be an important phase of the tuberculosis-eradication problem. A survey begun in 1925 and continued during the last fiscal year covered the inspection of about 14,000,000 fowls in 40 states. Approximately 10,000 of these flocks were found to be infected with tuberculosis. These inspections were made in the course of the routine testing of cattle by regularly employed veterinary inspectors.

Comparative Net Value of
Alfalfa Hay and Meal

The Institute of animal nutrition at Pennsylvania State college conducted some experiments to determine the comparative net energy values of alfalfa hay and alfalfa meal.

It was found that the net energy value of alfalfa hay of excellent quality when coarsely cut in a silage cutter is essentially the same as when finely ground into meal.

The net energy of any feed is defined by Henry and Morrison as the amount of energy left after deducting from the available energy the losses of energy in mastication, digestion, and assimilation of the feed.

The net energy of a feed is that used to maintain the body, not including requirements of digestion, following which if there be a surplus it may be used for growth, fat, milk, or wool or in performance of external work.

Agricultural Items

The man who believes everything usually ends up by believing nothing.

Neither Rome nor a good soil was built in a day, but a start had to be made.

Diversified farming is just another way of saying "Don't put all your eggs in one basket."

A crop of fruit as large as that produced in 1926 is not expected in 1927 because the weather was unusually favorable in 1926.

Silage is the cheapest known substitute for both pasture and hay. It is also the cheapest feed that can be produced on the farm.

Farm manure is valuable as a fertilizer, in that it contains the plant nutrients, nitrogen, phosphorus and potash in an available form.

By allowing the manure to lay in the barnyard in moist, loose piles, rapid decay and heating take place, which brings about the loss of organic matter and the setting free of nitrogen in a volatile form.

FOODS OFFERED

Now In Sanitary Packing, Truax Points Out.

It isn't such a far cry back to the days of 12 or more years ago when the corner grocery store used to display its pickles and olives, crackers and sugar in big open barrels to tempt customers, but during those intervening years food protection enforcement has succeeded in extending the expectancy of human life from an average of 37 years to 57 years, according to Charles V. Truax, state director of agriculture.

"The day of exposed food for promiscuous handling, vermin attack and dust collection is gone forever in Ohio," Director Truax declared. "Pure food laws, standardization of products and the rapid growth of the glass industry to a mass production basis for the sanitary packing of foods have been the important factors in protecting the cleanliness of the food supply.

"Go into the average grocery store of today and what do you find? Instead of the big, disease-breeding barrels of exposed foodstuffs, you see long shelves piled ceiling high with glass containers in all shapes and sizes temptingly packed with everything from shrimp and lobster to fruits, vegetables, pickles and olives. The big food producers today are no longer resisting pure, clean food enforcement. They are following the line of least resistance by standardizing their products through proper packings and advertising."

Motorcyclist Attacked by 4 Leopards, 2 Elephants

Capetown.—Four leopards and two elephants recently attacked a motorcyclist riding at night from Mombasa to Nairobi.

The road was so narrow that the rider could not turn his machine around, but by throwing out his clutch and racing his engine he frightened the leopards away. The explosions, however, did not alarm the elephants which continued their advance to attack the rider.

By speeding up his machine the motorcyclist managed to dodge between the two beasts and made his escape unharmed.

SCATTER SEEDS BY AIR ROUTE

Half Million Taken Aloft by Kite to Test Wind's Effects.

Portland, Ore.—How far does the wind carry the seed of trees? This is a question that often has been asked of and by foresters, but the answer only recently has been given through tests made under the auspices of the Pacific Northwest forest experiment station, on the snow-clad wheat fields of Wasco county, Oregon. The tests were in charge of T. T. Munger, director of the station, with A. E. Pickford of the British Columbia forest service co-operating. Thus the experiments were of an international character, and it is felt that the results will be of value to lumbermen and forest agencies wherever trees grow.

The aim of the tests was to determine the distance tree seeds are carried by winds of different velocities when released at the height of the average forest tree. In order to ascertain this fact, 500,000 Douglas fir, western red cedar, western hemlock, noble fir, western white pine and western yellow pine seeds were used.

Wind Measuring Instruments. In carrying on the work, a five-foot wing box kite was used, and from it was suspended a container for the seeds. Wind measuring instruments on the ground were attached to the kite by heavy cords. The kite, which was of powerful lifting capacity, was sent aloft at the end of 1,500 feet of piano wire wound round a reel held by a man.

The seed container was attached to the kite by means of a fish line, and from its cover was also a 225-foot tripping line. When the kite was sent into the air and had reached the desired tree height, the container was allowed to swing aloft with it, the tripping string was pulled, and the seeds released to make their flying journey to the ground.

Great Variation Shown.

It was surprising how far some of the seeds were carried. Although the average width of the lane in which the seeds fell was about 35 feet, the greatest distance any seed was carried was 4,000 feet. Released at an altitude of 200 feet, in a 23-mile wind, the maximum seed-fall, that is, the largest number of seed, fell within an area approximately 1,600 feet out from the point of release, with the extreme distance for any seed about 3,500 feet. In a six-mile gale, the maximum seed-fall was 1,000 feet from the release point, with the farthest distance carried being 1,800 feet.

The wing device on the seeds, rather than the weight, seemed to be the determining factor in the distance the seeds were carried. The heavy western white pine seed made almost an equal flight with the lighter western hemlock. It was noted that there was a great variation in the individual seeds. The seeds are not deposited in one spot, but distributed over a sizable area. The cedar seeds showed the smallest variation, while the hemlock, the lightest in weight, showed the greatest. In fact, it was the hemlock seed which made the record of 4,000 feet when released at an altitude of 200 feet in a 12-mile gale.

Rancher Raises 'Coons to Replace Poodles

Harrisburg, Ark.—Milady, who now walks down Fifth avenue with a curly poodle nestling in her arm or trotting at the end of a leash, may find a new pet selected for her by fashion's dictates as the result of an Arkansas industry.

Henry Higgins has set out to make raccoons popular as pets by establishing a ranch here for the little black animals. As yet it remains to be seen whether raccoons replace lapdogs, but the rancher is confident that if women refuse to wear the 'coons alive, they still will be glad to have them as coats.

He has fenced in an acre of ground, provided comfortable living quarters for the animals and with well-trained dogs is capturing raccoons. They are not difficult to raise, he says, as they are among the healthiest animals in existence.

U. S. Has Compass Hawker Used in Atlantic Fight.

Washington.—A relic marking one of the milestones in aviation history rests, unknown to almost everybody, in the office of Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics.

It is an air compass carried on the first plane which ever attempted a nonstop transatlantic flight, that of Harry Hawker and Lieut. Commander McKenzie Grieve of the British navy, in the spring of 1919.

The plane went down off the coast of Ireland and was picked up, with its pilots, by a schooner. Capt. A. C. Wilvers, commander of the schooner, who once was in the navy and was stationed with Admiral Moffett at the Great Lakes naval training station, presented the compass to him. The plane itself is on exhibition in the British museum.

NEWS ABOUT COURT HOUSE

General Happenings Taken From the Records of the Various County Offices.

Case Settled.

In the case of George and Virginia Groves, William Mithoff, Harold and Florence Broome, W. H. and Anna Cordray, Clarence Squires and Fred Younkin, of Ashville, in which they ask damages and for an injunction against the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company and Ferguson & Edmonson, contractors, Judge Charles A. Reid was called to hear the matter. An injunction had been granted by Judge Curtain last Thursday, but as he is a stockholder of the railroad company, he declined to hear the case and Judge Reid, of the Fayette court, was called.

The matter was heard on its merits Friday and the court refused to dissolve the injunction, but ordered the plaintiffs to put up a bond of $20,000, which was done.

The attorneys for the railroad company, Charles H. May, of this city, and Fred C. Rector, of Columbus, asked for a consultation with the plaintiffs' attorney, Barton Walters, and a settlement was effected and the injunction was dissolved. The company agreed to purchase the homes of Fred Younkin and W. H. Cordray and made money settlements with the others. The monetary settlements will amount to $19,100.

The trouble arose when the contractors brought their tools and began to cut down the street preparatory to making an overhead crossing.

TOO PROVINCIAL.

In Ohio a member of congress lives in a county that may be gerrymandered out of its present district, so that congressman, if he should seek re-election, might find himself outside looking in. But, as Lorenze Martin, The Times, Washington correspondent, says, under old rulings it has been established that residence in a district is not required of a candidate for congress if he resides in the state. So the prospective victim, Representative Davey of the Fourteenth district expresses no alarm.

But, while non-residents of congressional districts may be eligible technically, for congress, it is probable that America remains too provincial to follow the British custom to selecting lawmakers from outside the district boundaries.

Geographical lines still mean a great deal even in a country which declares itself one and indivisible. No doubt a great cry would be raised by home talent if a "foreigner" from a neighboring district should come asking for votes for a place in congress. In many instances when recommendations have been made by an "outsider", such for instance as the president of the United States, the voters have shown keen resentment.

Love for the old home-town is a good thing, but there are conditions in which it may be overcome. In some districts in the United States there could be no possible harm from selecting better representation by disregarding district lines. But the old court house ring is against anything like that in the country. It teaches provincialism, sectionalism, antagonism. It must take care of its friends and its relatives. It has no use for the "outsider" when officers are to be elected and pie distributed.—Louisville Times.

THE RED CROSS FUND IS INSUFFICIENT

FOR FLOOD SUFFERERS CARE THE ORGANIZATION DECLARES

Devastation of South Central Louisiana Now Feared—Should the Levees Give Way the Flood Would Be Released Over Seven Parishes To the South, Covering Four Million Acres, and Endangering the Lives of 250,000 People.

Devastation of south central Louisiana by the flood was regarded as imminent Sunday night by federal and state agents.

A rescue fleet and supplies for this district are being concentrated against a probable break in the levees of the Bayou des Glaises that is bearing the greater part of the pressure from the Mississippi river flood and backwaters of the great lake to the north.

Should these embankments give way, the flood will be released over seven parishes to the south, containing approximately 4,000,000 acres and 250,000 inhabitants. In this section is located the Louisiana "sugar bowl" where virtually all of the domestic cane is grown.

A steady battle on this flood front has been carried on for almost a month in the hope that the dykes might be held, but with the tide rising with unprecedented rapidity this hope virtually has been abandoned.

The fight still is being carried on, however, with the engineers concentrating all available forces at danger points that are developing along a stretch of more than 30 miles.

A break there will divert a large part of the flood water from the Mississippi to the Atchafalaya basin and materially relieve the situation south of the main stream from the mouth of the old river north of Baton Rouge to New Orleans, it is said.

On this front of more than 250 miles the Mississippi embankments still are holding.

The levees were inspected Sunday by Secretaries Herbert C. Hoover and Dwight F. Davis, who made an automobile trip from Baton Rouge to New Orleans after conferring with John M. Parker, former governor and Louisiana flood dictator, and state officials.

After a discussion of the situation with the members of the Citizens' Relief committee at New Orleans Mr. Hoover, who is President Coolidge's personal representative in the flood area, is to return to Baton Rouge to remain until the crisis is passed.

Meantime, Secretary Davis is to proceed to St. Louis to meet with Charles L. Potter, chairman of the Mississippi river commission, and other engineers for a discussion of a comprehensive plan of future flood control for recommendation to congress next December.

When in New Orleans both Secretary Hoover and Secretary Davis are to visit the artificial crevasse made week before the last at Caernavan, 15 miles below New Orleans, to relieve the flood pressure. This crevasse now is more than 2,000 feet wide, and high explosives still are being used to remove the batture in front of the break so that the full force of the current may be directed into St. Bernard and Plaquemines parishes, a large part of which already are flooded.

While crevasse waters from the Mississippi river were completing the inundation of the east central portion of the state, further improvement in the situation to the north, below the Arkansas line, was reported. The flood waters flowing down from the Arkansas river apparently have passed their crest and the levels in a number of towns in that section are lowering steadily.

With a break in the levee in the Atchafalaya river, in south central Louisiana, believed to be imminent, Red Cross officials Sunday continued concentration of a rescue fleet and supplies for use in that region.

The Achafalaya flows from a point near the conjunction of the Red river with the Mississippi to the gulf and should a break occur in the levee, a great body of water would be turned loose, relieving the situation along the lower main levee system between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, but flooding a vast area.

Many inhabitants of the section already have evacuated to new concentration camps in St. Martinville and St. Lambre parishes, but other thousands likely will have to be removed in boats in the event the levee goes out.

Radio Saves Life of Man Lost in Canadian Wilds

Montreal.—Radio saved the life of a man lost in the fierce blizzard that struck Saskatchewan recently. Robert Thomson, who lives with his parents at Bratton, was visiting friends in the neighborhood when the storm began. A newcomer to this country, he ventured out in the snow and quickly lost his bearings. A search failed to find him within 24 hours.

Constable Band of the Saskatchewan provincial police, when notified that Thomson was missing, asked radio station CFQC at Saskatoon to broadcast a description of him. At a point miles from Bratton an elevator man picked up the message and sent word that a man resembling Thomson had been seen not far from this town. The scene of the search was shifted at once and young Thomson was found not long after. He had wandered 40 miles in a day and a half, and was in an exhausted condition when found.

A Dollar Dinner for Four

To devise daily dinners which are tasty and wholesome, yet inexpensive, requires never-ending thought and planning on the part of the housewife. Some helpful suggestions may be found in the following menu, designed to serve four persons at a cost of only $1.00.

Corn Souffle Kraut Cocktail Buttered Whole Wheat Toast
Spinach and Egg Salad Pineapple Ice Coffee

SAUERKRAUT juice makes a wholesome and appetizing cocktail. The juice is now canned separately, costing 19 cents a can. 1/2 can, estimated as costing 10 cents, would make 4 cocktails. Cold and served in cocktail glasses it gives a decided "flick" to the appetite. A can of corn for the souffle may be had for 13 cents. Chop corn fine, add 1 cup milk and simmer ten minutes. Season, and stir in 1 teaspoon cornstarch blended with a little cold milk. Cook a few minutes, then whip in yolk of 1 egg and lastly the stiffly beaten whites. Bake 20 minutes in well-greased casserole. 1 egg will cost 4 cents. A can of spinach for the salad costs 19 cents, and 1 egg 4 cents. Chop spinach, mix with mayonnaise and serve a slice of hard-boiled egg on each portion. A loaf of whole wheat bread costs 10 cents. Enough coffee for four persons, at an average cost of 40 cents a pound, costs about 4 cents. A No. 2 can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple costs 19 cents. Mix 1 1/2 cups sugar and 1 cup hot water. Boil until syrup spins a thread. Add 1 cup cold water, 1/4 cup lemon juice and 2 cups crushed pineapple. Freeze until stiff. Total cost of main ingredients approximates 83 cents, leaving 17 cents to cover cost of butter and sugar for the meal, and minor ingredients.

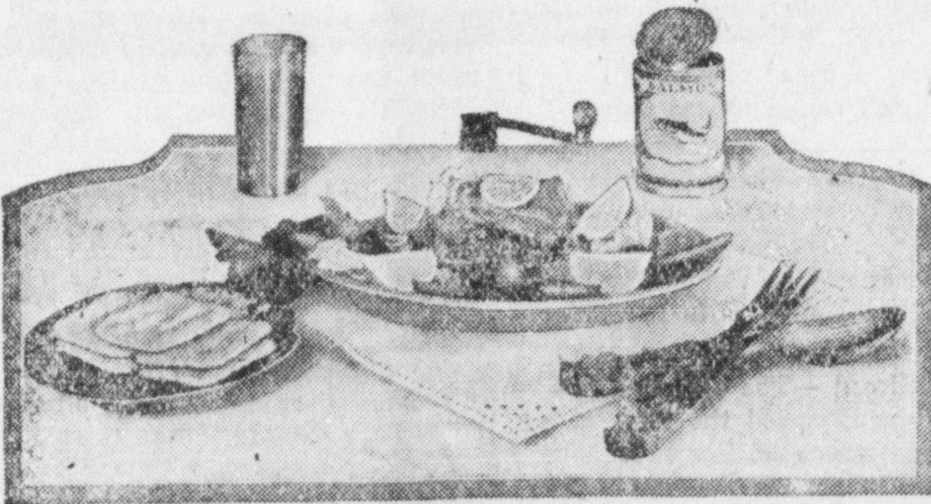

Asparagus for Appetizing and Attractive Dishes

AT this season of the year, after we have allowed ourselves the richer foods which we taboo during warmer weather, and before summer has brought her riches to our table, there is perhaps no more appetizing vegetable to serve than delicate asparagus. Asparagus on toast makes a delightful luncheon dish, and is prepared quickly by pouring a creamy white sauce over the asparagus, which has been heated, and laid on triangles of toast. Garnish with parsley. A satisfying dinner dish is Arlington Asparagus. Arrange canned asparagus stalks through rings (one-third inch wide) cut from lemon peel. Place on oblong pieces of buttered toast (from which crusts have been removed), moistened with liquid in which the asparagus was canned. Brush lemon rings with melted butter; place in oven to reheat asparagus, and arrange on serving dish.

For an attractive Asparagus Salad use canned asparagus tips, drained and rinsed. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with French dressing to which has been added one-half tablespoon tomato catsup.

Salmon Prevents Goitre

SALMON as a preventive of goitre is one of the newest discoveries of science, and one which is attracting unusual interest, due to the recent spread of goitre, not only among adults but also among school children. That salmon eaten plentifully will prevent goitre has been known for some time, since that fish contains iodine, the lack of which is one of the causes of goitre both in men and animals. There is a large goitrous region in the United States which includes the territory neighboring the Great Lakes, and much of the states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Utah, Colorado, Eastern Oregon and Washington. Physicians have discovered that when the gland has not enlarged but is starved for iodine, the provision of iodine will prevent goitre, but when the gland has already enlarged, the advice of a specialist should be obtained before taking iodine. A recent investigation of the iodine content of canned salmon has been engaged in by the Seattle Laboratory of the National Canners' Association and the study has revealed that this commodity is particularly high in iodine. Housewives will do well to serve salmon several times each week in some of its various tempting forms. As a meat course, a salmon steak taken from the can and heated, served with butter sauce and garnished with parsley is a very appetizing dish. For entrees and salads it is one of the most colorful and delightful dishes on the menu.

PUBLIC IS SHOWN NEED FOR SAVING NATION'S FORESTS

U. S. Timberland Placed at 470,000,000 Acres, One of Greatest National Resources.

Denver, May 6.—That the timberlands of the United States are one of the nation's greatest natural resources was forcibly brought before the public in statistics issued by the forest service of the federal department of agriculture during the observance of "American Forest Week."

The forest lands of the United States include 470,000,000 acres, none of which is required for agricultural purposes, the forest service pointed out, and if this great natural resource is properly managed for the production of a permanent timber crop, the value of the forest lands in the contribution of wood for construction and industry, in the maintenance of communities and support of wage earners and the protection of watersheds can hardly be estimated in terms of dollars.

Figures show that the United States is the leading lumber producing country of the world and its manufactured products ranking third in the number of wage earners and seventh in the value of products amongst all the industrial groups of the land.

The lumber industry is exceeded only by the textile, and iron and steel industries in number of wage earners—1,160,000 persons being engaged in 1925 in the lumber and forest products industries.

In power utilization the lumber industry ranks second only to the steel and iron industry, having used 3,500,000 horsepower in 1925.

The annual production of the lumber crop is valued at more than $3,000,000,000.

Of the present area of the country actually forested, 19 per cent is owned by the federal government, 2 per cent by the states and municipalities, and 79 per cent by private owners.

If all the forest lands, actual and potential, in the country were producing trees at maximum capacity, the United States would have no serious timber supply problem, according to the forest service.

Eighty million acres of the 470,000,000 forest lands, however, are entirely denuded and in a non-productive condition, and the United States is using up its timber supply four times as rapidly as that supply is being replaced through growth.

As a consequence reforestation and management of forests must be placed on a scientific and permanent production basis, if the lumber industry is to be maintained on its present profitable scale.

In their observance of "American Forest Week," the forest service warned citizens of the great danger that lurks in forest fires to the lumber industry.

"The 'red terror' is the chief enemy of trees and forests," the forest service pointed out.

Sweeping through a timberland, the red flames of a forest fire beyond control may wreak untold havoc, damaging valuable mature trees, destroying young growth, laying waste grazing lands, injuring protective watersheds and converting to a blackened, fire-scarred waste what were cool, inviting woodlands beckoning to the nature-lover and outdoor recreationist.

The United States forest service places the average annual number of forest fires in the United States during the past 10 years at 51,000. The average area swept by fires each year stands at 15,000,000 acres. The annual damage runs up to $20,000,000, not taking into account the damage to young growth, watersheds and recreational facilities, which can hardly be estimated.

BIGAMY CHARGED

Girl's Story of "Death Threat" Marriage Brings Arrest of Husband.

Cleveland, May 6.—Forced into a loveless marriage by members of a Pittsburgh Black Hand ring was the story told police today by pretty Mrs. Liszetta Favoritto Seetonni, 19, Cleveland.

The story resulted in the arrest of her husband, Sam Seetonni, 27, on a charge of bigamy. Liszetta plans to base divorce proceedings on the outcome of this case.

The girl said Seetonni and two members of a Pittsburgh Black Hand ring went to her father's house in Pittsburgh two years ago, and, under threats forced her to accompany them to a justice of the peace, who performed a civil ceremony.

Liszetta said she never lived with her husband. The young bride was placed in the House of the Good Shepherd here. She remained there, she said, until she discovered her husband had married again.

C. & O. STOCK SKYROCKETS
New York, May 6.—(U.P.)—The opinion in Wall Street today that the Interstate Commerce Commission would sanction the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad merger on May 10, brought a wave of buying into stocks involved in the consolidation. Chesapeake & Ohio soared to new high ground at 175 1/2, closing near that level at 175 3/8, up 3 3/4 points for the day. Nickel Plate spurted 1 1/2 points while good gains also were scored by Erie and Pere Marquette. It is expected in Wall Street that a new holding company will be formed to take over Chesapeake & Ohio holdings of Nickel Plate and Van Ness Co., personal holding company of the Van Swearingens, sponsors of the new merger and that a new bond issue will be sold, with Chesapeake & Ohio stock as collateral.

Black and White in the Spring Style Program

Such a furor for the black-and-white compose as is at this immediate moment! There are ways and means without end of interpreting this popular theme, one of the most effective being the black satin skirt topped with a white satin blouse, this applying either to the two-piece frock or the one-piece. The white satin-bloused frock in the picture is the very essence of smartness. Note the choker tie-collar, the long snug-fitting sleeves, the narrow belt, and especially the black embroidered cone-shaped pockets—all outstanding style details.

How Neckline Problem May Be Easily Solved
The neckline is often a perplexing problem to the woman who makes her own frocks, but with large and varied displays of neckwear to select from she need only finish off the neck of the frock and adjust whatever collar she prefers. If she has several of these the appearance of her dress will be changed and she will not become "so tired of it."
Among the newest offerings is the surplice collar that extends to the neckline, and the new square collar with the requisite bow at the corner. An exquisite lace collar ties in a bow at the low V and the ends form a rippling jabot. An attractive V collar has a shower of ribbon loops in three colors attached near the shoulder, and the cuffs are similarly adorned. All the mentioned collars have cuffs.
This neckwear combines embroidered batiste and lace, the Valenciennes and Alencon being prominent. These charming collars give a dainty touch to the sheer dresses so much in evidence in advance summer modes, and they give a dressy effect to the print frock that is going to be such a favorite the coming season.

Chic One-Piece Frock Slender and Straight
The increasing vogue of one-piece frocks centers attention upon certain details that give them a distinctly different aspect from the tubelike dresses of several seasons ago. While they are slender and straight in line they achieve an effect of movement and grace by the use of plaits, sometimes stitched part way down, often pressed into place but left free.
Another detail that does away with any tendency toward monotony is the yoke, which sometimes appears only in the back and again may be seen extending far down on the front of the frock. This pointed effect, when combined with a bateau neckline, gives a new line that is distinctly different.
A frock of this type is ideal and may be worn all through the spring. The original is made of crepe satin in the new pinkish beige tone. The yoke is tucked just below the shoulders, while the frock itself is laid in small box plaits held in place with a belt. A flower of the same material is posed on the shoulder.

Black Broadcloth Used for Tailor-Made Coats
Black broadcloth continues to be much used for tailor-made coats. These may have a long-waisted bodice and a flared skirt. The flare is concentrated principally on the sides, and is increased by the use of very thick lynx or light fox fur. The roll collar and the cuffs are also of the fur. Very tailor-made looking coats are also made in satin and in thick crepe marocain, generally in black or dark blue. The roll collars, cuffs, and the edge of the coats are often quilted. Sometimes only the edge is quilted in order that fur can be used for the cuffs and collars. On plain coats sumptuous quilted linings are used.

Ears Are Being Worn
Ears are being worn more and more in Paris this season. Every hairdresser is devising new methods of getting a woman's hair out of the way, either by developing a re-enforced flat curl in front of the ear, or by training the hair to stay above or behind it. The bob remains as the standard, but the necessity for exhibiting the ears has led to variations.

CORROSIVE SUBLIMATE
Or Tar Paper Disks Save Cabbage Plants.

Cabbage maggot flies may be kept from depositing their eggs on the young plants by encircling the stem with a tar paper disk, or the eggs and very young maggots may be destroyed by a solution of corrosive sublimate, according to H. L. Gui, assistant in entomology at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.
The flies emerge in great numbers late in April and throughout May. In a few days they begin to deposit eggs in the soil at the base of the plants. Less than a week is required for the eggs to hatch into maggots which feed upon the roots. Unless they are destroyed before the maggots establish themselves in the plant roots, nothing can be done to prevent injury.
The control recommended by Mr. Gui is a solution of 1 ounce of corrosive sublimate in 10 gallons of water. This is applied to the stem of the plant and soil around the base in half teacup quantities to kill the eggs and very young maggots.
The applications are made at weekly intervals, beginning not later than 5 days after the plants are set. The applications may be made with a sprinkling can or small sprayer, but these must be cleaned immediately after being used to prevent injury from the action of the corrosive sublimate on the metal. The solution should not be stored in metal containers as its reaction not only injures the metal but renders the solution worthless as an insecticide.
Tar paper disks about three inches in diameter with a slit from the margin to a hole in the center may be fitted on the plants as they are set and allowed to remain throughout the season. The hole should fit the stem snugly and the disk lie flat on the ground. These disks may be made from single-ply tar paper or they may be purchased from insecticide or seed houses.

Plastic Surgery Seen as Boon to Ex-Convicts
San Quentin, Calif.—The plaint of ex-convicts that they seldom have a chance to "go straight" after having run the gauntlet of a penitentiary may find its end in a science popularized by the post-war age—plastic surgery.
Plastic surgery has remodeled the ugly countenance of Jim Daly, fifty-five-year-old convict about to be discharged from San Quentin. Ten days after the operation he walked among his cellmates, unrecognized.
Believing he was to be turned into a world which would slam the door in his face, Daly requested Dr. Leo Stanley, prison physician, to perform the operation.
Doctor Stanley, who has studied plastic surgery, consented. He pared Daly's cauliflower ear down to normal size and used the pieces to fill a gap in his nose. The physician said 22 others have asked for operations.
The prisoners insist that with facial alterations they would be free to really become "new men" to the outside world.

No Uniform Length
The length of a league varies in different countries. The Roman league was 1,376 modern English miles, while the league brought to England by the Normans was equal to 2.9 modern English miles. The metric league is four kilometers. At present the league is a nautical measure equal to the twentieth part of a degree—that is, three geographical miles, or 3,637 statute miles.

MANY GOOD MEN.

If there ever was a time when there were more bad men than good, it is now; and it probably never was for nature will not allow the positive to be overcome by the negative, the good by the bad, light by darkness, heat by cold, life by death.

The tug-of-war between right and wrong grows fierce at times, but there is never a question as to the right ultimately succeeding. It may get the worst of it for a time, but not for long, and certainly not forever.

In spite of the impression that there are more bad people than good ones for all emergencies, there is room for more good ones, and there is a good man for every good, sensible woman.

One reason so many women pick up bad sticks is because they don't know good ones. They are looking for snug, smooth, pretty ones, instead of searching in the open world they seek for them in hothouses, pretty groves and show places.

Instead of looking for those who have come up in the open, battled successfully for existence and grown into hardy men, they look for the dainty, trim, natty fellows who grow beneath protecting roofs, behind plate glass and under care of well paid nurserymen. These are nice to look upon, their fine manners are agreeable and their attentions are most pleasing.

Alongside of these, the sturdier sons of nature look rough and rugged. Their strong hands are coarser, their sure feet larger and their manners less dainty.

But, mind you, the grasp of their strong hand is more assuring, their standing firmer and their manner more determined.

There are plenty who are waiting to be found, but they are not much given to full dress, champagne suppers and petting parties.

AGRICULTURAL TRAIN COMING TO OUR COUNTY

Swine Sanitation Special to be in Orient June 6, Run by the B. & O.

An agricultural train emphasizing round worm control is coming this way soon. Paul O. Hurley, agricultural agent for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and Paul Gerlaugh of the Ohio State university were in conference with County Agent H. S. Lewis relative to the Swine Sanitation special which will spend the forenoon of Monday, June 6, in Orient and the afternoon of Monday, June 6, in Mt. Sterling.

The university has been emphasizing round worm control in some of the counties of southwestern Ohio for four years. The success of the farmers in this extension project has prompted the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to run this special train to assist the farmers in their territory to increase the profits of their hog business. If the farmer has more money to spend, the railroad will profit by this situation. The farmer may buy railroad tickets to take the family to Washington D. C., or they may decide to buy a new dining room suite which would be shipped to their dealer thus making increased freight receipts.

"Anything that makes for a more prosperous community," says Mr. Hurley, "makes for a more prosperous railroad."

The university is interested in getting the information relative to the swine sanitation in general use by hog growers, because the men who have followed these suggestions say their hogs have made them more money when these practices have been followed.

The Swine Sanitation special will carry material and information on internal parasites, emphasizing the common round worm and will also show the preferable protein feeds to use with corn in feeding hogs.

Assisting the railroad and the university will be a representative of the United States department of agriculture. The Experiment Station is assisting in supplying material on feeding.

SEVEN MILLION IN EX-SERVICE UNITS

Germany Has Largest Single Group of Veterans.

Paris.—Seven and one-half million survivors of the World war are enrolled in various ex-service men's associations and veterans' organizations throughout the world, according to unofficial figures tabulated by the Federation Interalliee des Anciens Combattants, or Allied Legions, and published in the latest edition of the Fideac bulletin, issued monthly from Federation headquarters in Paris.

Four and one-half million of these organized ex-service men reside in the countries allied against the central powers during the World war and 3,000,000 are citizens of Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria.

Of the 4,500,000 in the allied countries, 3,235,250 are affiliated, through their national organizations, with the Federation Interalliee des Anciens Combattants.

Germany Has Largest.

The largest single organization of ex-service men of the World war is in Germany. It is the State Association of Former Warriors, numbering 2,000,000 members. Seven other ex-service men's associations in Germany have a total membership of 732,000 members.

France has the largest number of enrolled veterans of any of the allied countries, its 14 associations of ex-service men having a total membership of 1,615,500. Eight of these 14 associations, with a combined membership of 1,122,500, are affiliated with the Fideac. The largest of these associations is the National Union of Ex-Service Men (the Union Nationale des Combattants), with a roll of 400,000 members.

Italy comes third in the number of its organized veterans, having 750,000. The majority of these are members of the National Association of Italian Ex-Service Men, which is a part of the Fideac.

650,000 in Legion.

In the United States the one big association of ex-service men is the American Legion, also a member of the Fideac. The American Legion numbers approximately 650,000 members. Other associations in the United States have 70,000 members.

The British Legion, affiliated with the Fideac, has 400,000 members. Belgium has 118,000 organized ex-service men, of whom 107,000 are affiliated with the Fideac. Their largest association is the National Federation of Ex-Service Men, which represents 56,000 members.

There are 458,250 members of the nine ex-service associations in Poland, seven of which are members of the Fideac.

Rumania also has nine associations with a total membership of 157,000. The largest organization is that of the National Union of Ex-Service Men and it is a member of the Fideac.

In Czechoslovakia there is a large division of ex-service men, there being 13 different national associations. Three of these associations, having a total membership of 2,500, are members of the Fideac. The remaining 10 associations count 200,000 members.

Austria has 142,800 enrolled ex-service men; Hungary, 70,000, and Bulgaria 40,000.

Court Verdict Doooms Man to Obscure Place in Home

Buffalo, N. Y.—Husbands must take a back seat in the modern home, Federal Judge John K. Hazel ruled, in effect, here.

Handing down his decision in the case of Mary Swierblenski, convicted on March 10 of selling liquor at her home, Judge Hazel upheld the contention of Roy P. Ohlin, assistant United States attorney, that "today the husband has assumed a position of relative obscurity." Counsel for Mrs. Swierblenski had argued, that she could not have been convicted because her husband, Benny, had been acquitted of the same charge and that under the old English common law a wife could not be convicted and sentenced for a misdemeanor when her husband, arrested with her for the same offense, was not similarly treated.

Judge Hazel held, in announcing the decision, that Mrs. Swierblenski was rightfully convicted, that a similar case had come before United States Circuit Judge D. J. Hammond in Tennessee in 1881. Judge Hammond had this to say and Judge Hazel concurred in the opinion:

"It is almost an absurdity in this day to pretend that husbands can and do coerce their wives into the commission of a crime. To hold it to be a fact is a relic of a belief in the ignorance and pusillanimity of women, which is not, and perhaps never was, well founded."

Alaskan Steamships Plan to Serve Reindeer Steaks

Tacoma, Wash.—Steamships operating from here to Alaskan points are planning to reduce food costs this summer by purchasing reindeer meat at Seward and Nome for the homeward trip. It is believed reindeer meat will not only be relished by passengers and crews alike but will afford a means of advertising one of the resources of the northland. Herds of deer grazing at Cantwell, on the government reserve will supply the demand at Seward and tundra herds near Nome can be utilized.

Unusual Outpouring of People to Pay Last Respect in Native Village.

The attendance at the funeral of the late William Clifton, at Darbyville Sunday afternoon, was unusually large. The little Methodist church was filled with an overflowing crowd. O. Tressner, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Huffer, Mr. and Mrs. James Hoone, Mrs. Cecilia Baskett and three daughters of Columbus; and Mr. and Mrs. Gail Boes and son, Alfred, of Dayton.

New Ocean Surveys to Be Made by U. S. Navy

Washington.—Extension of surveying operations of the Navy department in Southern waters will be undertaken this summer when surveys of the Gulf of Panama and the Pacific approach to the Panama canal will be made.

Charts of the Cuban coast and Gulf of Venezuela are now being made, and when completed will supersede old maps, data for which was obtained from Spanish surveys of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries.

Recently the navy has adopted innovations in surveying methods, among them aerial photography, radio and the sonic depth finder, a device based on deflection of sound from the bottom of the sea.

ONE FIELD THAT WOMAN SELDOM MAKES GOOD IN.

In spite of her achievements in practically every other field, woman still seems unable to meet the requirements for success as a movie director, declares Charles S. Dunning in an article in this week's Liberty. For, as he points out, altho several women have directed one or more pictures with varying measures of success, only one, Miss Lois Weber, has earned the title of full-fledged director.

The reason for their lack of success in this field is that they can't stand the gaff, the writer explains. "Miss Weber herself," Dunning writes, "holds out no very encouraging prospect to the girl ambitious to direct."

"If you haven't got superabundant vitality," Miss Weber is quoted, "a hard mind that can be merciless in shutting off disturbances, and the ability to keep going from sunrise to midnight, don't try it. You'll never get away with it."

"Few women can stand the strain. Few get the opportunity for the test. There are easier ways for a gifted woman to make fame and fortune as great as can be found in the motion picture business — opportunities that were not open to me when I first saw a camera."

EXPERIMENT STATION WILL VISIT FARMER

Many Have Access to Cattle, Hogs and Sheep in Circleville, June Fourth.

Since all Ohio farmers can't visit the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station at Wooster, the station will move out to see the farmers this spring.

Western and central Ohio farmers, livestock producers in particular will have access to the experiment station cattle, hogs and sheep this year, and to the results of experiments with them, at livestock days at Fostoria on May 31, Bellefontaine on June 2, and at Circleville June 4.

Stockmen in northeastern Ohio, or in other parts of the state, for that matter, will be welcomed as usual at the annual livestock day at Wooster, this year on May 27.

Eight lots of cattle, 18 lots of hogs and 4 lots of lambs will go on tour. They will show the results of different feeding methods and rations and the results of the same rations on different grades of animals.

81ST ANNUAL STATE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Meets in Columbus at Neil House This Week, 1500 Physicians Expected.

Columbus.—About 1500 physicians are expected in Columbus for the 81st annual convention of the Ohio State Medical association for three days, beginning tomorrow.

Dr. John B. Alcorn, president of the Columbus Academy of Medicine will welcome the physicians.

A number of physicians were playing in the association's annual golf tournament at the Scioto Country today. In addition to the scientific program, there will be luncheons, college and fraternity reunions, exhibits and clinics, it was announced by the general arrangements committee.

Good-Natured Men

Everybody can tell a good-natured man by looking into his face. So it is that the good-natured ones of the country are those who are most imposed upon, but as they bear it cheerfully, thereby clinching their claim to good nature, nobody, not even the good-natured ones, need complain.—Exchange.

Famous Apples

The Baldwin apple was raised near Lowell, Mass., about 1750. The Jonathan and Northern Spy were grown in New York, the Grimes Golden in West Virginia and the Maiden Blush in various places before 1800. The Red Astrachan was imported from Russia in 1835, the Rome Beauty was grown in Ohio by 1848, the Stayman Winesap appeared in Kansas in 1806 and the Delicious in Iowa in 1895.

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

The writer has been handicapped some in keeping up with the news this last week on account of our mail was heavier than common and it seemed like all of it had to have attention. As for instance, we got two letters today and they had such a similarity you would have thought they were sent by the same people. They both said that was the final notice. Which is why we've been busy.

Miss Gloria Blossom, who has been down from the city visiting her aunt, Mrs. Hettie Thomas, meant to go home today. But she's so used to being a half hour late every morning at the place where she works that she went to the depot the same way and missed the train.

Mrs. Milton Hall had some of their window screens put up the other day while Milton was away, and that night when he thought he heard the fire alarm, he stuck his head clear thru one of the screens before he knew it was there.

Several of our citizens were entertained last Saturday night by a medicine man who performed in a flivver at the postoffice corner. And after listening at what he said his medicine would cure, why it seems like just pure carelessness for a person to be sick any more.

Nath Atkins was offended a little yesterday on account of some strangers asked him the way to the basket factory and after he gave them the directions, he saw them stop at the next corner and ask somebody else. Which Nath says looked like they thought he wasn't dependable.

Jud Johnson, who keeps a few chickens for a pastime, found a hen in his lot a few days ago that he didn't know he had. He thinks it is his all right and that he had just sort of overlooked it up to this time. However, he is taking the precaution of keeping the chicken in a coop for a while to make it feel thoroly satisfied to stay.

Somebody was asking Harley Burton's wife what she does with her spare time, and Harley, who happened to be within hearing, spoke up and said that she used it to think of things for him to do in his spare time.

Earl Smiley, who likes to provide entertainment for people, was trying yesterday in the postoffice to imitate the way Marshal Bailey talks. And when he chanced to look around behind him and saw Bailey standing there close, why he had to strain himself a good deal in an effort to act like it was a cold in his throat when him talk that way.

Lewis Jackson went over to Brownell last Saturday, and in preparing for the trip, he found that his best shirt had a big patch in the back. His wife urged him to wear his coat so that the place wouldn't show. But Lewis said no that he'd go just that way, for he didn't want to deceive anybody.

The remark was made recently how old Cap Bowers, who can't get out much for himself, always asks somebody every day to stop at the postoffice and see if there any mail for him. And seems like that's the most he has to look forward to while he waits for them to come back and tell him there wasn't anything.

Billy Boy, the four year old son of Tom Riley, came very near having to go to bed without his supper last Sunday. And the reason was he took his dog in the house while they had company to let everybody see how he was scratching himself after he came out of the old livery barn.

Mrs. Millie Hicks was tolerably nervous all day yesterday on account of she found that she forgot to lock her front door the night before.

Ballooning Spiders

Ballooning, says the Dearborn Independent, is the method of migration used by many species of spiders. Standing in an open space, with the body elevated, the spider projects from the spinnerets a line of silk which continues until the spider feels the pull of the wind. It releases its hold as it is borne away.

HOW TO INCREASE THE KITCHEN'S USEFULNESS

Springtime being the time for moving to a new house or a thoro cleaning and revamping of the old one, the following directions for putting the kitchen into efficient order, from an article in this week's Liberty, are very timely.

"A handy place for everything and everything in its place.

"Make the most possible use and adaptation of every utensil you have.

"Discard tools or equipment that do not justify their storage space.

"Plan with working schedules, time budgets, etc., as would an expert executive.

"Proper heights for all working surfaces, planned according to the elbow height of the worker. (Table surfaces 8 inches below the elbow height of the worker. Sink drain boards 8 inches below the elbow height of the worker).

"Maintain the kitchen as a workshop for meal preparation only.

"Things used most often nearest at hand.

"Insist on narrow shelves, so that everything is visible.

"Nothing on the floor. This saves bending and makes the floor easy to clean."

Bought Two Tickets for Three

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

JERRY JOSLIN'S carefree whistle, which had continued from the street up the two flights which led to his off-the-hall bedroom, was checked by the sight of his mail, pushed in under the door. Among other envelopes was one that was long and plump, bearing a return address which unmistakably proclaimed the contents to be pink, green and yellow application blanks for the season's big football games.

The question of the very last game of all had been in the background of Jerry's mind for some time, but he had figured it could stay in the background until the application actually arrived. And here they were, reminding him of last summer's folly.

He had gone for his vacation far up into northern Connecticut where there was a brook famed for its trout. And it was while standing knee deep in that brook, playing a gamey old fellow, that his foot caught on a crevice of rock, wrenching his ankle severely.

During the temporary invalidism the woman who ran the Tourists' Rest where he was boarding had been very good to him and her daughter, Leonore had offered the only diversion He promised to take her to the big game.

How the dickens could he know that, when that time came, Leonore would have faded to a dim memory, and Gloria Manners would fill his entire horizon?

Unfortunately, there was also more to it than the mere question of making good the promise when he was interested in another girl. The Athletic association had seen fit to double very nearly the price of tickets and the purchase of two of them meant something to a young man whose law practice was slim.

Yet he had no choice in the matter and, sitting down at what passed for a writing table, he filled out his application, enclosing check, and wrote a brief note to Leonore.

What consolation he managed to get was of short duration. A prompt reply followed the letter.

"Dear Jerry:
"It is so nice about the game. Am looking forward. Hope we keep on having lovely weather. Mother is coming with me.

"Your old friend,
"LEONORE TUCKER."

It was quite evident that the little country girl did not know the ins and outs of the ticket game. No, all too plainly she was unaware that getting hold of extra tickets made rich men's passages into heaven or camels going through needles' eyes mere child's play.

Yet, remembering that Leonore's mother had been kind to him, he knew that all he could do was give up his own seat in some such way that the two women would not be made uncomfortable by suspecting the real reason.

Meanwhile, he refrained from calling on Gloria, torturing himself wondering what other young men—or worse yet, what young man—was taking his place. And when he was not worrying over that, he speculated as to whether Leonore would expect to resume relations at the half-sentimental stage they had left off.

He could not answer that question satisfactorily at the station. She blushed and squeezed his hand a little, but the presence of her mother acted as a preventive of anything demonstrative.

He left them at the portal of the big enclosure, having given them to understand that his seat was in the cheering section and that his presence there was of utmost moment.

Then he sauntered across the trampled mid to the space where the parked cars huddled like gigantic turtles. For a moment he was free to think of Gloria.

Suddenly he heard his name called and turned quickly.

There sat Gloria, looking very charming, at the wheel of her little roadster. Amazed, he went over to her at once. "Gloria! What—I should think—"

"That I'd be inside? Well—" and she sighed—"you see, nobody asked me! But, if I may inquire, where is the pretty blonde you came in with a few minutes ago?"

And then Jerry told her the whole story from beginning to end.

When he had finished, she looked at him thoughtfully. "I couldn't understand what had become of you," she said. "I was curious to know if you were taking anyone to the game, and knowing what section your class allotted tickets in, I thought I'd hang around on the chance you might go by."

"Gloria!" cried Jerry. "If you went to all that—why, my darling, it must mean the most wonderful thing in the world!"

And evidently it did, for Jerry climbed into the roadster and there were two persons that afternoon who wouldn't have changed places with the yelling, singing crowds inside the stadium.

As for Leonore, she managed an aside just before getting on the train. "Hope you didn't mind my bringing mother, but you see I'm engaged to Willie Stone back home and he wouldn't let me come unless I brought her too."

"Thank heaven you did!" cried Jerry, so fervently that Leonore is puzzling about it yet.

AMUSEMENTS

Weather report:—Rain, combined with local laugh showers and rolls of thunderous applause to be continued until Tuesday.

In other words, Douglas MacLean's latest Paramount comedy "Let It Rain," arrives at the Met theater on Monday and will remain there for two days. So that the title may not be misunderstood, "Let it Rain," refers to a man and not the weather. "Let It Rain" Riley is a slow, easy-going marine, who believes in getting things as they come, and not in going after them. That is, he remains in this state till he falls for a girl and a sailor buddy does the same. Obviously, she won't come unless he proves his worth and that's where "Let It Rain" gets off to a flying start.

As no war is being fought, it's less to go out and capture an enemy general. But the marines now guard the government mail and "Let It Rain" with the girl's help, endeavors to foil a gang of desperadoes. Most of the action takes place aboard the battleship and inside a regular mail coach. Laughs and gasps come thick and fast when revolvers start popping off, when the car is detached from the locomotive and they find themselves speeding along on a runaway train and when—but why continue?

"Let It Rain" with smilin' Doug MacLean is said to be even better than the star's most recent successes, "Hold That Lion," "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "That's My Baby." Shirley Mason recently known as "Kosher Kitty Kelly" plays the lone feminine part. Eddie Cline, director of some of Jackie Coogan's finest films, makes his Paramount debut.

Inequality in Strides

The reason lost persons always walk in a circle is because one takes unequal steps. One stride will be longer than the other, and will cause a person to walk in a circle unless he has landmarks to guide him.

Famous Causeway

The Giant's Causeway is a famous promontory of closely packed basaltic columns on the coast of Antrim, north Ireland, west of Bencore head, eight miles from Portrush. Its true origin was a great outpouring of basalt in the Tertiary period, but legend ascribed it to Finn McCool or Fingal, who built it as a bridge between Ireland and Scotland for the giants to cross from Antrim to Staffa.

WOMAN RAISES CHAMPION STEER

Miss Una Johnson and Her Champion Steer.

Steadily encroaching on man's domain, another new honor has been awarded the so-called weaker sex. Stock raising has been added to woman's repertoire, and we have pictured above Miss Una Johnson at Elkhorn, Iowa, who raised the champion Iowa steer exhibited at the 1926 International Live Stock Exhibition at Chicago. This steer, among several carloads of other prize baby calves also exhibited at the exposition, was purchased by the Rock Island railroad, which was the first railroad to buy prize-winning calves for its dining-car service.

Seed Potatoes Not Always True

Incorrect Naming of Varieties Too Frequent to Be Accidental.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of several years' tests by the United States Department of Agriculture of the seed potato offerings of a considerable number of firms, it has been found that the incorrect naming of potato varieties is far too frequent to be entirely accidental. Out of 99 lots of named varieties purchased from 45 seedsmen in 1925, 26 were found to be incorrectly named. The most flagrant example of misnaming, or the substitution of one variety for another, was that of a firm from whom three named varieties were ordered. When the three lots were received it was found that the Spaulding Rose or Rose No. 4 had been substituted for all three varieties. In other words, the seedsmen had filled the order out of a seed bin containing a variety not called for in the order.

Few Correctly Named.
Although a considerable number of varieties were ordered in 1925 only 26 lots were actually received. Of this number only five proved to be of the variety specified in the order. Whether the smaller number of orders filled was due to a desire on the part of seedsmen to avoid having their offerings studied by department officials, or whether, as claimed, they were actually sold out is impossible to determine. The outstanding fact is that less than 25 per cent of those furnished were correctly named.

Dangerous Point.
The danger involved in the use of incorrectly named seed potatoes lies in the possibility of having a late variety substituted for an early one, thereby delaying the market maturity of the crop beyond the normal marketing period. In the absence of effective legislative measures for the control of the abuses mentioned, the only protection afforded the purchasers of small quantities of seed potatoes is to buy certified seed potatoes whenever they are available.

A more wholesome respect on the part of retail seed potato dealers for the correct naming of varieties is highly desirable and can only be brought about through an insistent demand on the part of the purchasing public for the handling of only standard commercial varieties.

Mignonette Is Favored as Surest Lettuce Head

To produce lettuces that form good heads (a real vegetable gardening accomplishment) try the little Mignonette, a variety that many gardeners find will head when they have no luck with anything else. Iceberg, also known as New York or Wonderful, is another late variety which many gardeners like, but Mignonette is the surest.

There are two types of head lettuce, the butterheads and the crisp heads. Both varieties named are of the crisp head sort and they usually are easier to grow than the butterheads. Of the latter the well-known early variety, Big Boston, is best for amateurs.

Inoculate Sweet Clover When Sowing First Time

If sweet clover is being sown on land for the first time, it is necessary to inoculate the seed. Seed may be sown with oats in the spring, or in February. Either plan is successful. Amounts of seed varying from six pounds to sixteen pounds have been recommended, but most people sow from eight to twelve pounds. Sweet clover is not harder to establish than red clover, provided there is plenty of carbonate of lime in the soil. It will not grow on an acid soil. The plant ranks high as a pasture, and the hay from the first cutting, when the plants are not too woody, is approximately equal to alfalfa hay in feeding value.

Swine and Fowl TB Keen Interest Is Shown in Eradication of Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Alongside the extensive measures taken by the co-operative veterinary forces to eradicate tuberculosis from cattle, the problem of eradicating the disease from swine and fowls has received close attention, according to a report recently issued by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

A keen interest has been shown in the eradication of the disease from swine on account of the premium being paid by a number of packers for swine from any modified accredited area; that is, a circumscribed area officially recognized as free from tuberculosis. Reports from many of the modified accredited areas indicate that swine owners have realized substantial sums in this way.

Investigations regarding the source of infection of tuberculosis in swine were conducted with a view of determining to what extent such infection might be traced to tuberculosis fowls. The question of fowl tuberculosis also continues to be an important phase of the tuberculosis-eradication problem. A survey begun in 1925 and continued during the last fiscal year covered the inspection of about 14,000,000 fowls in 40 states. Approximately 10,000 of these flocks were found to be infected with tuberculosis. These inspections were made in the course of the routine testing of cattle by regularly employed veterinary inspectors.

Comparative Net Value of Alfalfa Hay and Meal

The institute of animal nutrition at Pennsylvania State college conducted some experiments to determine the comparative net energy values of alfalfa hay and alfalfa meal.

It was found that the net energy value of alfalfa hay of excellent quality when coarsely cut in a silage cutter is essentially the same as when finely ground into meal.

The net energy of any feed is defined by Henry and Morrison as the amount of energy left after deducting from the available energy the losses of energy in mastication, digestion, and assimilation of the feed.

The net energy of a feed is that used to maintain the body, not including requirements of digestion, following which if there be a surplus it may be used for growth, fat, milk, or wool or in performance of external work.

Agricultural Items

The man who believes everything usually ends up by believing nothing.

Neither Rome nor a good soil was built in a day, but a start had to be made.

Diversified farming is just another way of saying "Don't put all your eggs in one basket."

A crop of fruit as large as that produced in 1926 is not expected in 1927 because the weather was unusually favorable in 1926.

Silage is the cheapest known substitute for both pasture and hay. It is also the cheapest feed that can be produced on the farm.

Farm manure is valuable as a fertilizer, in that it contains the plant nutrients, nitrogen, phosphorus and potash in an available form.

By allowing the manure to lay in the barnyard in moist, loose piles, rapid decay and heating take place, which brings about the loss of organic matter and the setting free of nitrogen in a volatile form.

TWELVE WORDS

FOODS OFFERED

Now In Sanitary Packing, Truax Points Out.

It isn't such a far cry back to the days of 12 or more years ago when the corner grocery store used to display its pickles and olives, crackers and sugar in big open barrels to tempt customers, but during those intervening years food protection enforcement has succeeded in extending the expectancy of human life from an average of 37 years to 57 years, according to Charles V. Truax, state director of agriculture.

"The day of exposed food for promiscuous handling, vermin attack and dust collection is gone forever in Ohio," Director Truax declared. "Pure food laws, standardization of products and the rapid growth of the glass industry to a mass production basis for the sanitary packing of foods have been the important factors in protecting the cleanliness of the food supply.

"Go into the average grocery store of today and what do you find? Instead of the big, disease-breeding barrels of exposed foodstuffs, you see long shelves piled ceiling high with glass containers in all shapes and sizes temptingly packed with everything from shrimp and lobster to fruits, vegetables, pickles and olives. The big food producers today are no longer resisting pure, clean food enforcement. They are following the line of least resistance by standardizing their products through proper packings and advertising."

Motorcyclist Attacked by 4 Leopards, 2 Elephants

Capetown.—Four leopards and two elephants recently attacked a motorcyclist riding at night from Mombasa to Nairobi.

The road was so narrow that the rider could not turn his machine around, but by throwing out his clutch and racing his engine he frightened the leopards away. The explosion, however, did not alarm the elephants which continued their advance to attack the rider.

By speeding up his machine the motorcyclist managed to dodge between the two beasts and made his escape uninjured.

SCATTER SEEDS BY AIR ROUTE

Half Million Taken Aloft by Kite to Test Wind's Effects.

Portland, Ore.—How far does the wind carry the seed of trees? This is a question that often has been asked of and by foresters, but the answer only recently has been given through tests made under the auspices of the Pacific Northwest forest experiment station, on the snow-clad wheat fields of Wasco county, Oregon.

The tests were in charge of T. T. Munger, director of the station, with A. E. Pickford of the British Columbia forest service co-operating. Thus the experiments were of an international character, and it is felt that the results will be of value to lumbermen and forest agencies wherever trees grow.

The aim of the tests was to determine the distance tree seeds are carried by winds of different velocities when released at the height of the average forest tree. In order to ascertain this fact, 500,000 Douglas fir, western red cedar, western hemlock, noble fir, western white pine and western yellow pine seeds were used.

Wind Measuring Instruments. In carrying on the work, a five-foot wing box kite was used, and from it was suspended a container for the seeds. Wind measuring instruments on the ground were attached to the kite by heavy cords. The kite, which was of powerful lifting capacity, was sent aloft at the end of 1,500 feet of piano wire wound round a reel held by a man.

The seed container was attached to the kite by means of a fish line, and from its cover was also a 225-foot tripping line. When the kite was sent into the air and had reached the desired tree height, the container was allowed to swing aloft with it, the tripping string was pulled, and the seeds released to make their flying journey to the ground.

Great Variation Shown.

It was surprising how far some of the seeds were carried. Although the average width of the lane in which the seeds fell was about 35 feet, the greatest distance any seed was carried was 4,000 feet. Released at an altitude of 200 feet, in a 23-mile wind, the maximum seed-fall, that is, the largest number of seed, fell within an area approximately 1,600 feet out from the point of release, with the extreme distance for any seed about 3,500 feet. In a six-mile gale, the maximum seed-fall was 1,000 feet from the release point, with the farthest distance carried being 1,800 feet.

The wing device on the seeds, rather than the weight, seemed to be the determining factor in the distance the seeds were carried. The heavy western white pine seed made almost an equal flight with the lighter western hemlock. It was noted that there was a great variation in the individual seeds. The seeds are not deposited in one spot, but distributed over a sizable area. The cedar seeds showed the smallest variation, while the hemlock, the lightest in weight, showed the greatest. In fact, it was the hemlock seed which made the record of 4,000 feet when released at an altitude of 200 feet in a 12-mile gale.

Rancher Raises 'Coons to Replace Poodles

Harrisburg, Ark.—Milady, who now walks down Fifth avenue with a curly poodle nestling in her arm or trotting at the end of a leash, may find a new pet selected for her by fashion's dictates as the result of an Arkansas industry.

Henry Higgins has set out to make raccoons popular as pets by establishing a ranch here for the little black animals. As yet it remains to be seen whether raccoons replace lapdogs, but the rancher is confident that if women refuse to wear the 'coons alive, they still will be glad to have them as coats.

He has fenced in an acre of ground, provided comfortable living quarters for the animals and with well-trained dogs is capturing raccoons. They are not difficult to raise, he says, as they are among the healthiest animals in existence.

U. S. Has Compass Hawker Used in Atlantic Fight.

Washington.—A relic marking one of the milestones in aviation history rests, unknown to almost everybody, in the office of Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics.

It is an air compass carried on the first plane which ever attempted a nonstop transatlantic flight, that of Harry Hawker and Lieut. Commander McKenzie Grieve of the British navy, in the spring of 1919.

The plane went down off the coast of Ireland and was picked up, with its pilots, by a schooner, Capt. A. C. Wilvers, commander of the schooner, who once was in the navy and was stationed with Admiral Moffett at the Great Lakes naval training station, presented the compass to him. The plane itself is on exhibition in the British museum.

General Happenings Taken From the Records of the Various County Offices.

Case Settled.

In the case of George and Virginia Groves, William Mithoff, Harold and Florence Broome, W. H. and Anna Cordray, Clarence Squires and Fred Younklin, of Ashville, in which they ask damages and for an injunction against the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company and Ferguson & Edmonson, contractors, Judge Charles A. Reid was called to hear the matter. An injunction had been granted by Judge Curtin last Thursday, but as he is a stockholder of the railroad company, he declined the hear the case and Judge Reid, of the Fayette court, was called.

The matter was heard on its merits Friday and the court refused to dissolve the injunction, but ordered the plaintiffs to put up a bond of $20,000, which was done.

The attorneys for the railroad company, Charles H. May, of this city, and Fred C. Rector, of Columbus, asked for a consultation with the plaintiffs' attorney, Barton Walters, and a settlement was effected and the injunction was dissolved. The company agreed to purchase the homes of Fred Younklin and W. H. Cordray and made money settlements with the others. The monetary settlements will amount to $19,100.

The trouble arose when the contractors brought their tools and began to cut down the street preparatory to making an overhead crossing.

TOO PROVINCIAL.

In Ohio a member of congress lives in a county that may be gerrymandered out of its present district, so that congressman, if he should seek re-election, might find himself outside looking in. But, as Lorenze Martin, The Times, Washington correspondent, says, under old rulings it has been established that residence in a district is not required of a candidate for congress if he resides in the state. So the prospective victim, Representative Davey of the Fourteenth district expresses no alarm.

But, while non-residents of congressional districts may be eligible technically, for congress, it is probable that America remains too provincial to follow the British custom to selecting lawmakers from outside the district boundaries.

Geographical lines still mean a great deal even in a country which declares itself one and indivisible. No doubt a great cry would be raised by home talent if a "foreigner" from a neighboring district should come asking for votes for a place in congress. In many instances when recommendations have been made by an "outsider," such for instance as the president of the United States, the voters have shown keen resentment.

Love for the old home-town is a good thing, but there are conditions in which it may be overcome. In some districts in the United States there could be no possible harm from selecting better representation by disregarding district lines. But the old court house ring is against anything like that in the country. It teaches provincialism, sectionalism, antagonism. It must take care of its friends and its relatives. It has no use for the "outsider" when officers are to be elected and pie distributed.—Louisville Times.

FOR FLOOD SUFFERERS CARE THE ORGANIZATION DECLARES

Devastation of South Central Louisiana Now Feared—Should the Levees Give Way the Flood Would Be Released Over Seven Parishes To the South, Covering Four Million Acres, and Endangering the Lives of 250,000 People.

Devastation of south central Louisiana by the flood was regarded as imminent Sunday night by federal and state agents.

A rescue fleet and supplies for this district are being concentrated against a probable break in the levees of the Bayou des Glaises that is bearing the greater part of the pressure from the Mississippi river flood and backwaters of the great lake to the north.

Should these embankments give way, the flood will be released over seven parishes to the south, containing approximately 4,000,000 acres and 250,000 inhabitants. In this section is located the Louisiana "sugar bowl" where virtually all of the domestic cane is grown.

A steady battle on this flood front has been carried on for almost a month in the hope that the dykes might be held, but with the tide rising with unprecedented rapidity this hope virtually has been abandoned.

The fight still is being carried on, however, with the engineers concentrating all available forces at danger points that are developing along a stretch of more than 30 miles.

A break there will divert a large part of the flood water from the Mississippi to the Atchafalaya basin and materially relieve the situation south of the main stream from the mouth of the old river north of Baton Rouge to New Orleans, it is said.

On this front of more than 250 miles the Mississippi embankments still are holding.

The levees were inspected Sunday by Secretaries Herbert C. Hoover and Dwight F. Davis, who made an automobile trip from Baton Rouge to New Orleans after conferring with John M. Parker, former governor and Louisiana flood dictator, and state officials.

After a discussion of the situation with the members of the Citizens' Relief committee at New Orleans Mr. Hoover, who is President Coolidge's personal representative in the flood area, is to return to Baton Rouge to remain until the crisis is passed.

Meantime, Secretary Davis is to proceed to St. Louis to meet with Charles L. Potter, chairman of the Mississippi river commission, and other engineers for a discussion of a comprehensive plan of future flood control for recommendation to congress next December.

When in New Orleans both Secretary Hoover and Secretary Davis are to visit the artificial crevasse made week before the last at Caernavan, 15 miles below New Orleans, to relieve the flood pressure. This crevasse now is more than 2,000 feet wide, and high explosives still are being used to remove the batture in front of the break so that the full force of the current may be directed into St. Bernard and Plaquemines parishes, a large part of which already are flooded.

While crevasse waters from the Mississippi river were completing the inundation of the east central portion of the state, further improvement in the situation to the north, below the Arkansas line, was reported. The flood waters flowing down from the Arkansas river apparently have passed their crest and the levels in a number of towns in that section are lowering steadily.

With a break in the levee in the Atchafalaya river, in south central Louisiana, believed to be imminent, Red Cross officials Sunday continued concentration of a rescue fleet and supplies for use in that region.

The Achafalaya flows from a point near the junction of the Red river with the Mississippi to the gulf and should a break occur in the levee, a great body of water would be turned loose, relieving the situation along the lower main levee system between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, but flooding a vast area.

Many inhabitants of the section already have evacuated to new concentration camps in St. Martinville and St. Lambre parishes, but other thousands likely will have to be removed in boats in the event the levee goes out.
